The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying the GPEN website. The browser's address bar shows the URL <http://www.gpen.info/index2.php>. The website header includes the GPEN logo, the text "GLOBAL PROSECUTORS E-CRIME NETWORK", and a login form with fields for "Username" and "Password", a "LOG IN" button, and a "Forgot password?" link. A navigation menu below the header contains links for "HOME", "ABOUT GPEN", "TRAINING MATERIALS", "LIBRARY", "FORUM", and "CONTACTS". The main content area features a world map with yellow dots and connecting lines, and the text "joining together to fight e-crime". Below this, there are two sections: "Training Materials" with a document icon and the text "Download e-crime training materials from prosecuting authorities around the world and upload your training materials to share global best practice.", and "Library" with an information icon and the text "Download information, legislation and legal guidance on e-crime from our international library and upload information you have found useful." At the bottom left, a small line of text reads "The Global Prosecutors E-crime Network has been". The browser's status bar at the bottom shows "Internet".

ABOUT GPEN

Often referred to as high tech, cyber or e-crime, for the purposes of the Global Prosecutors E-Crime Network (GPEN) initiative, e-crime means any crime where information or communications technology is used. This includes cases where computers or other devices are used as a crime tool, for example distribution of child abuse images, cases where computers are the targets of crime, for example hacking offences, and where computers or other devices are used as storage and communication tools to facilitate the commission of an offence, i.e. drug offences.

The International Association of Prosecutors (IAP) has recognised the importance of putting resources into tackling e-crime. All countries need to ensure that they have a safe and secure online environment for users, by tackling e-crime and ensuring that prosecutors have the tools to deal effectively with on-line crime. The GPEN initiative is designed to help the global fight against e-crime by:

- The network will encourage enhanced international cooperation in the e-crime arena which will be of benefit to all member countries.
- Law enforcement remains hampered by national borders and precious resources are wasted by duplication of training. GPEN will have a major impact on the effective prosecution of e-crime by improving the exchange of information, reducing duplication and significantly raising analytical and prosecuting capacity.
- A global e-crime prosecutor's network will enable all jurisdictions to develop a co-ordinated approach for dealing with e-crime that supports effective prosecutions and promotes the Cybercrime Convention. The proposed network will not compete with the

TRAINING MATERIALS

One of the aims of the GPEN project is to facilitate the education and training of e-crime prosecutors around the world. There is a global need for training and standardisation of legal and procedural standards in dealing with e-crime matters. Training of prosecutors to prosecute e-crime cases is a priority area for international efforts against cyber crime.

Training materials can be downloaded and adapted or improved for use by prosecutors around the world. The revised training programme can then be uploaded to the system to enable prosecutors in other countries to take advantage of the improvements or changes that you have made.

LIBRARY

The GPEN library is designed to enable prosecutors from around the world to share best practice and expertise with one another. E-crime is a global issue and in order to fight it effectively we need to work together and pool our resources.

Library information can be downloaded for use by law enforcement organisations and you can also upload information that you think will be of use to prosecutors in other countries.

All library material listed here are free for use of law enforcement organisations only.
