KEMPEN

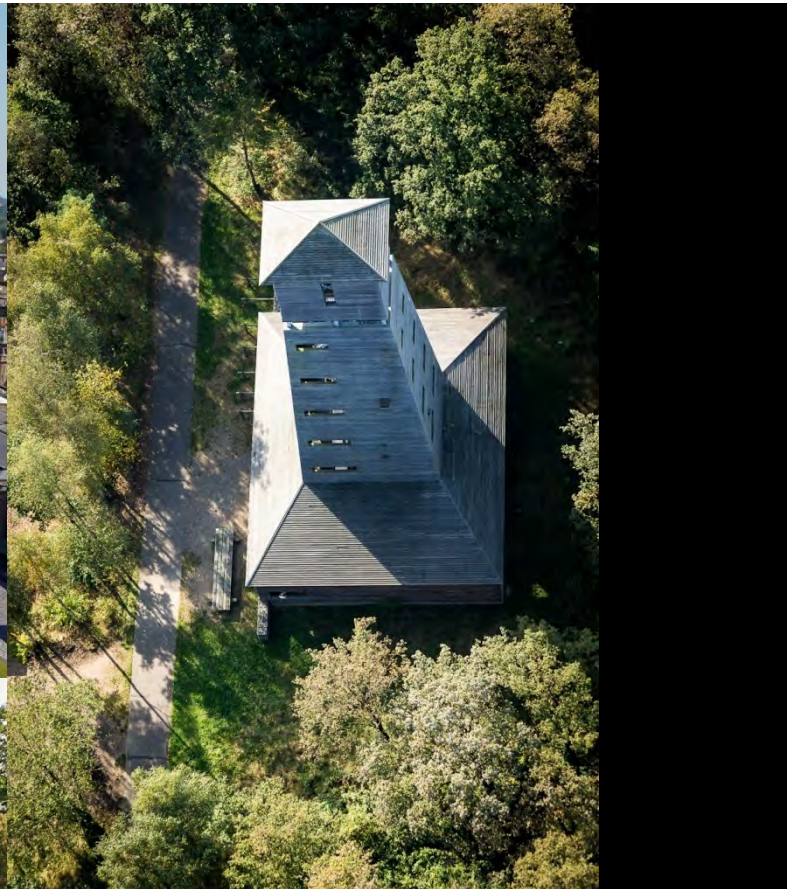

HOGE KEMPEN

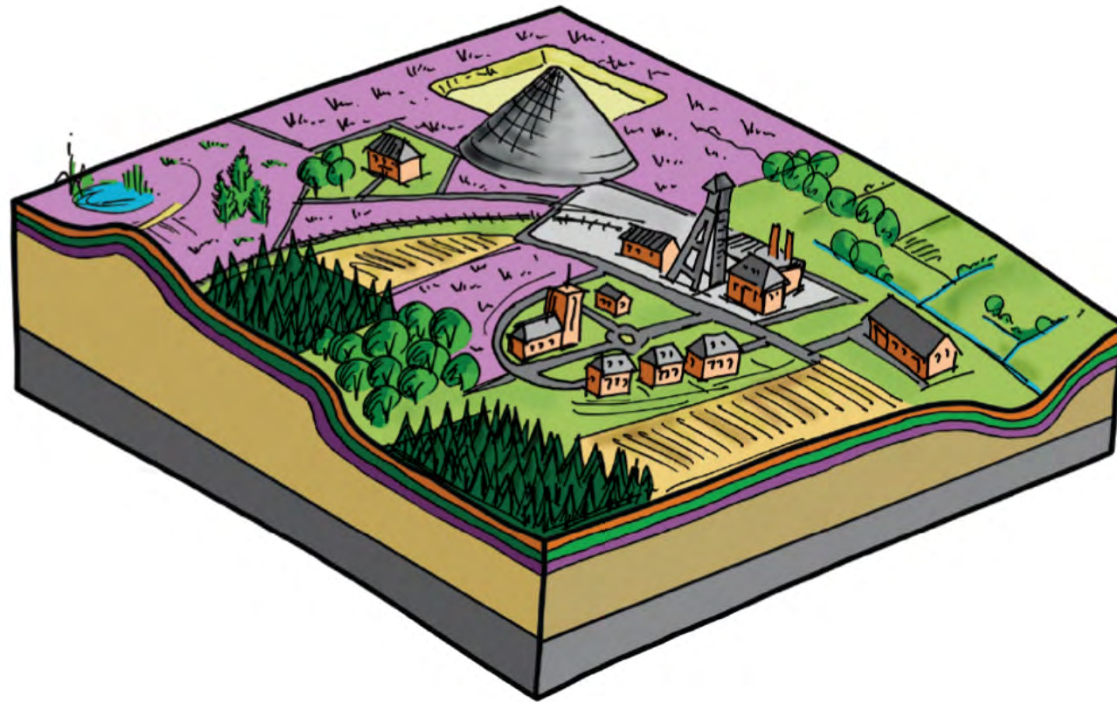

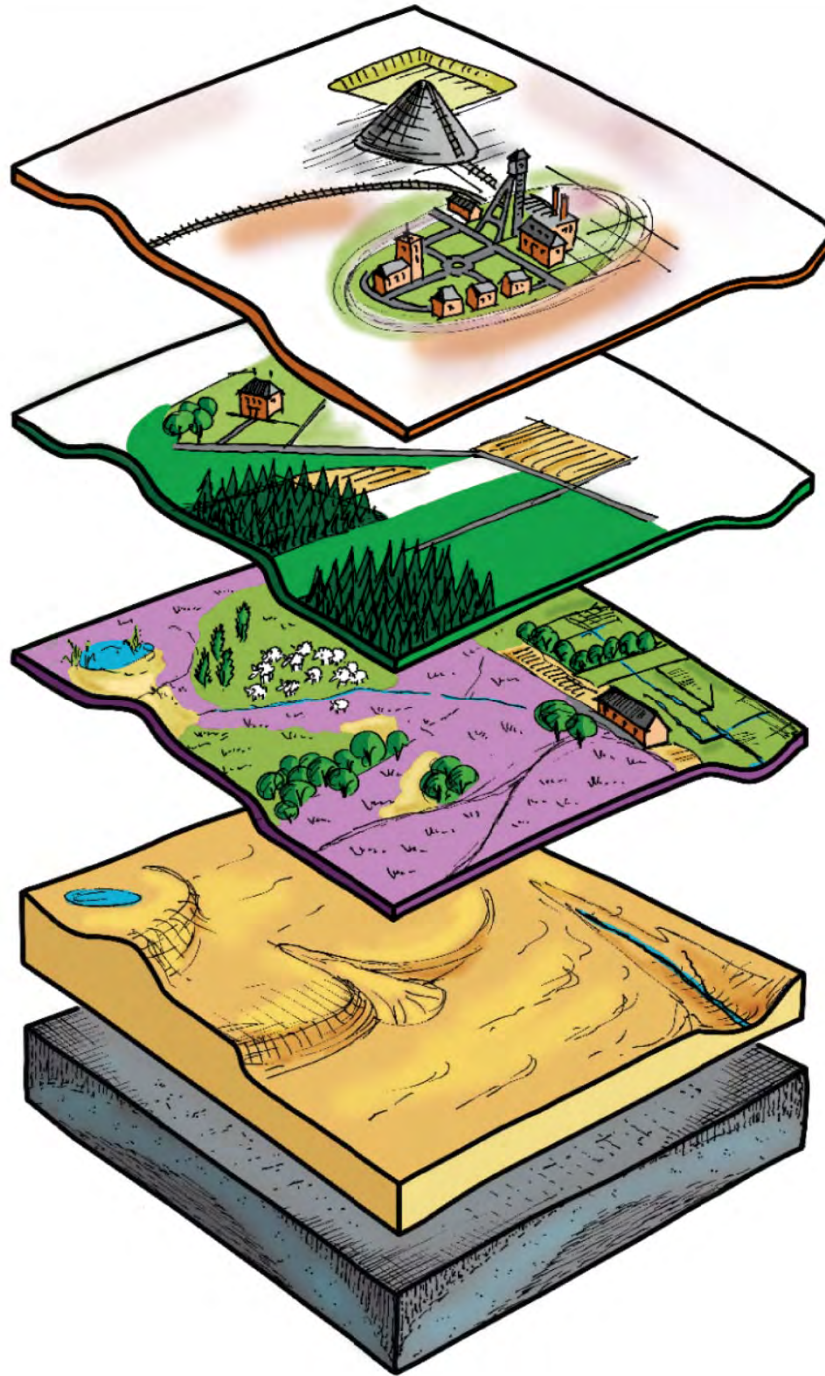

- Situated in the east of Belgium (Europe)

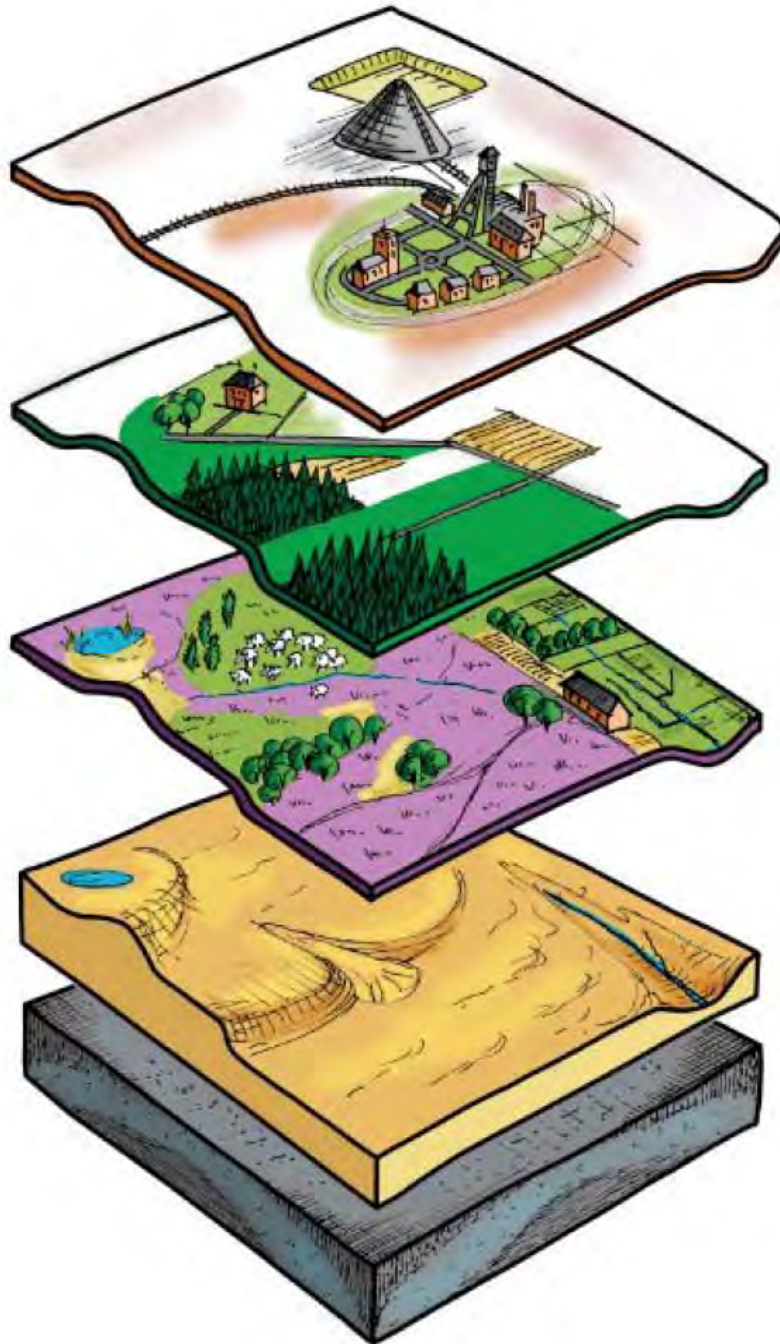

- Located on the Kempen Plateau: river sediment cone with pronounced plateau edges, formed during Ice Ages
- Core area = National Park Hoge Kempen (6000 ha of heath land, coniferous and ancient forests on gravel-rich sandy soil)
- Directly surrounded by remains of early 20th-century coalmines with garden cities, historical stream valleys, rich natural spring areas on plateau edges

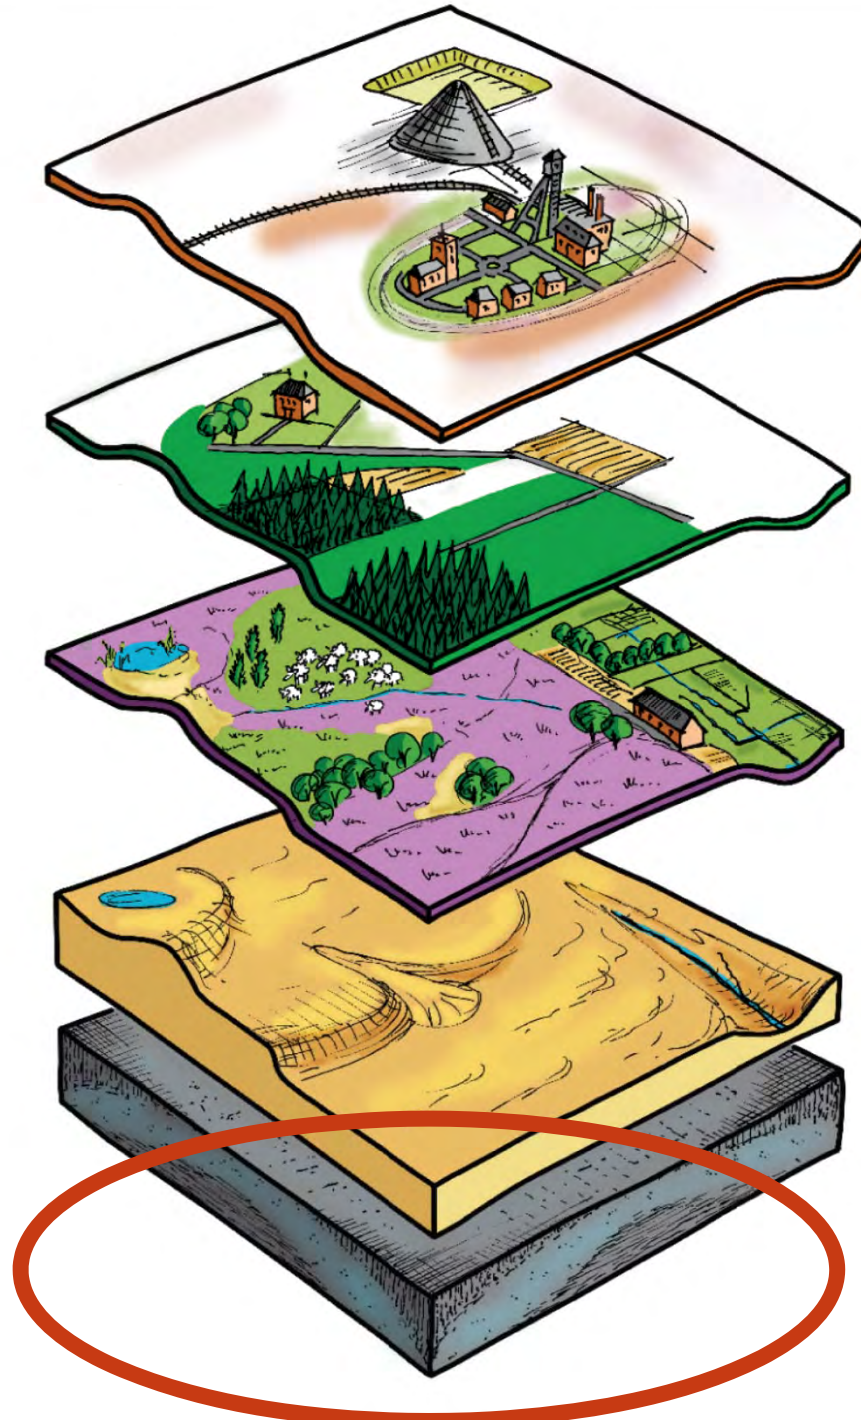

5| coalmining | urbanization and garden-cities | accelerated socio-demographic development

4| turning point | decline of heath land area and agriculture because of spatial planning, traffic infrastructure, agricultural and industrial revolution | landscape painters and first nature conservation

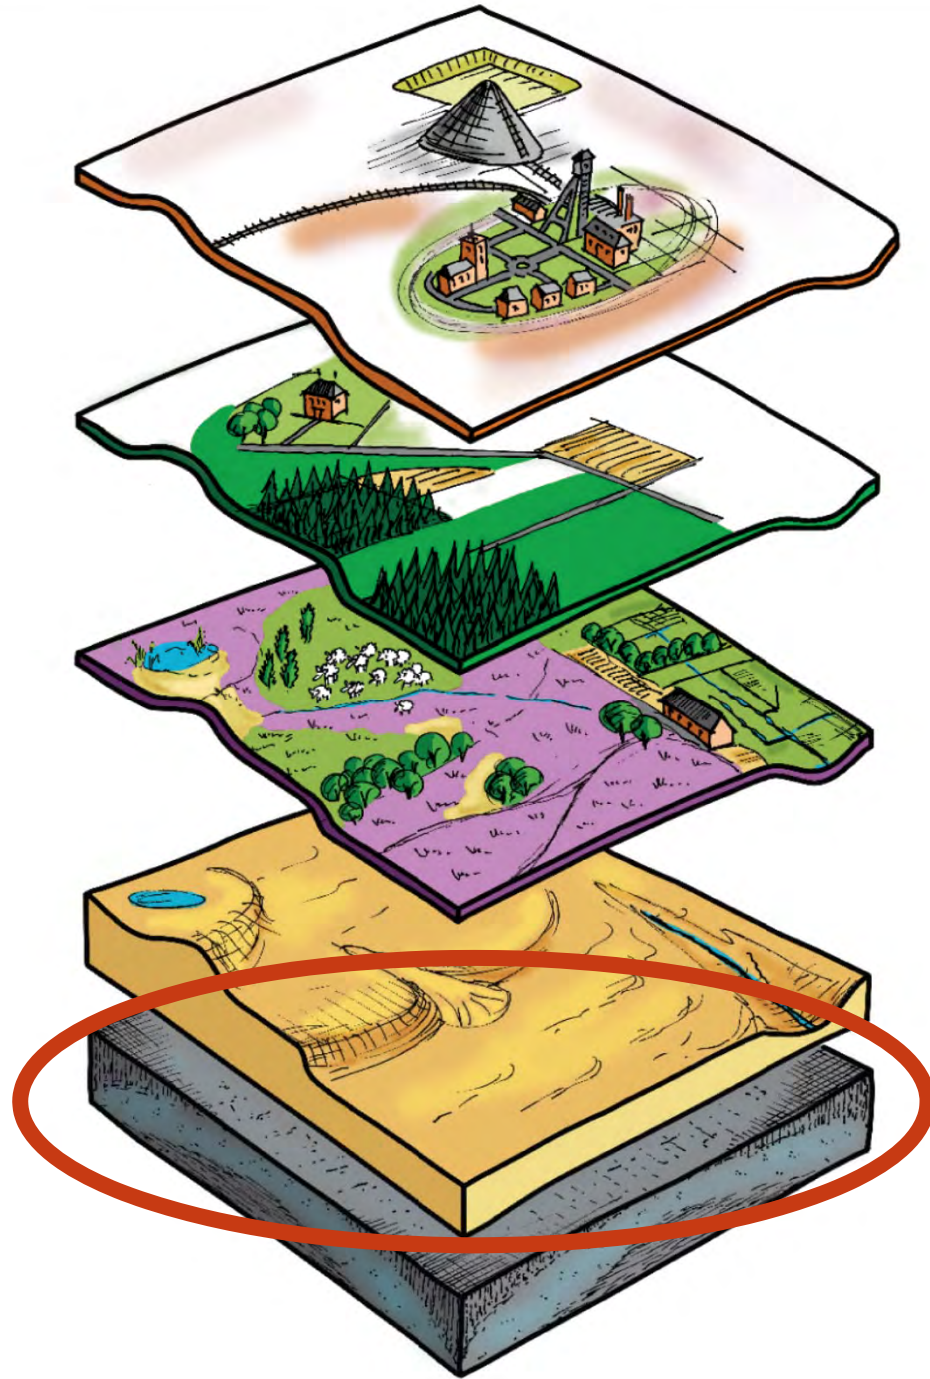

3| human influence on the landscape (from first settlements till 19th century) | heath land economy

2| morphologic landscape formation (from last Ice Ages till presence of sedentary man) | creation of sediment gravel plateau

1| geological processes | formation of coal
