CM/ResDH(2013) 224	BEL / L'Erablière A.S.B.L.	49230/07	24/05/2009 24/02/2009	Access to and efficient functioning of justice: Inadmissibility of the applicant association's (for environment protection) request to have a planning permission annulled by the Conseil d'Etat on the grounds that it did not include a statement of the facts of the case. (Article 6 §1)	The applicant received the authorisation at issue and the just satisfaction awarded; thus the absence of any possibility to reopen administrative proceedings is no obstacle to closure. Change of case-law of the Conseil d'Etat in order to ban excessive formalism. The judgment was published and disseminated.
CM/ResDH(2013) 153	BGR / Angelov Angel	51343/99	15/05/2007 15/02/2007	Access to and efficient functioning of justice: Unmotivated dismissal of the applicant's petition for review (cassation) by the Supreme Court of Cassation. (Article 6 §1)	No request for reopening was submitted. As regards the motivation to refuse reopening of proceedings, according to practice developed since the impugned decision, grounds for refusing reopening must be detailed. In case of inaccuracies, the person may apply to the President of the Criminal Division of the Supreme Court of Cassation, who may cancel the order and initiate reopening of the proceedings. The compliance of cassation appeals with the formal requirements of the Criminal Procedure Court is examined by a judge from the second instance court. If the judge decides that a cassation appeal does not meet the formal requirements, the interested party may appeal his or her order before a panel of the Supreme Court of Cassation. The judgment was translated, published and disseminated.

The applicants did not address the Prosecutor General in order to ask him to file a request for reopening of the criminal proceedings with the Supreme Court of Cassation. Nor did they bring their claims in the civil courts, as they (Article 6 §1)	could have done in order to prevent these claims to become time- barred. Their civil claims are now time-barred. On 04/02/2013, the Supreme Court of Cassation adopted an interpretative decision concerning the examination of civil claims brought in criminal proceedings which had later been terminated due to the expiry of a limitation period, amnesty or death of the accused. According to this decision, the criminal courts are now required to continue the examination of a civil claim brought in criminal proceedings in the above-mentioned situations. The issue concerning the excessive length of criminal proceedings is examined in the Kitov group.

CM/ResDH(2013) 103	BGR / Dimitar Ivanov	19418/07	14/02/2012	Freedom of movement efficient functioning of justice: Unjustified prohibition to leave the country on the ground that the applicant had been criminally convicted and not yet rehabilitated; excessive length of criminal proceedings and lack of effective remedy in this respect. (Articles 2 of Protocol N°4 as well as 6 §1 and 13)	The travel ban was lifted. A transitional provision of the Personal Documents Act 2010 specified that within three months of its entry into force all existing measures previously imposed under section 76(2) of this Act would cease to have effect. The criminal proceedings ended in 2006. For general measures see CM/ResDH(2012)156 in Nalbantski.

(Article 8 taken in conjunction with Art. 13)	The applicant's name was struck out from the police records in 2002. The relevant confidential instruction of the Minister of Internal Affairs No I-90/24.12.1993, was revoked in 2002. A new legal framework was adopted in 2006. According to Decree No Iz-701/17.03.2011, police registration of personal data is made only when charges are brought in relation to a serious intentional crime. Police authorities ex officio or upon request from the person concerned are under obligation to end police registration, when criminal proceedings at stake are discontinued or the person is acquitted. Refusals can be appealed against before the administrative courts. The Code of Ethics adopted by the Ministry of the Interior lists a number of rules of conduct for police officers. Special training courses are being organised. A permanent

(Articles 2 procedural limb and 6§1)	The speed of proceedings will be followed-up closely after the transfer the case to Sofia Regional. General measures are examined in the Dimitrov and Hamanov and Finger group of cases. Measures were taken with regard to potential omissions in the management, training, control or definition of duties of the different categories of staff in the nursing homes, including in 2002, amendments to the Social Assistance Act which established a new structure – the Social Assistance Agency (SAA). The Inspectorate to the Executive Director of SAA performs specialised control over the application of standards by the social service institutions as well as by service providers within the community. In case of breaches of the respective legislative provisions, inspectors are entitled to apply compulsory administrative measures. The Inspectorate issues compulsory instructions and may also propose deletion from the Register of Social Service Providers. SAA elaborates and imposes compulsory methodical instructions and guidelines and organises trainings and supervisions published on the Agency's website. The legislative amendments 2003 also provide for the preparation of individual plans including healthcare, educational, rehabilitation and recreational activities and family contacts. Individual plans are assessed and updated every six months. The Public Council to the respective municipality performs inspections for the application of State standards and good practices on a regular basis and upon necessity. Regular controls are also performed by the Social Assistance Agency via the Inspectorate and by other State institutions. The judgment was translated, published and

(Article 2 of Protocol No. 7)	With Decision 3/17.05.2011 of the Constitutional Court the impugned provision was pronounced unconstitutional in the part announcing that the District Court judgment could not be appealed to a higher court. On 25/11/2011, Decree 904/1963 on Fight against Minor Disturbance was amended and currently includes the legal possibility to appeal against a District Court judgment imposing a sanction of detention for a minor disturbance of the public order. The use of routine handcuffing in detention facilities is not a common practice and all such cases are based on particular facts and circumstances which necessitate the taking of additional security measures in order to preserve the life and health of others. The judgment was circulated to the General Directorate for the Execution of Sentences and the Supreme Administrative Court ("SAC"). A decision to use security measures is subject to judicial review. General measures concerning length of criminal proceedings and lack of effective remedy in this respect are examined in the groups Kitov and Dimitov/Hamanov. CM/ResDH(2013) 238	BGR / Kehaya and Others	47797/99+	12/04/2006 12/01/2006 (Merits) 14/09/2007 14/06/2007 (Just satisfaction)	Access to and efficient functioning of justice and protection of property: Non-respect of final character of a judgment ordering restitution of certain plots of land and resulting interference with property rights. (Articles 6§1 and 1 of Protocol No1)	According to Article 302 of the new Code of Civil Procedure (in force as of 01.03.2008), a final judgment by an administrative court shall be binding upon the civil court regarding the lawfulness and the validity of an administrative act. Moreover, according to Article 177 of the Code of Administrative Procedure, a judgment by which an administrative court quashed or amended an administrative act is res judicata with regard to all persons (erga omnes). The civil court is thus no more competent to perform the verification (indirect judicial review of the civil court over administrative Decision N $_{0}$ 6 of 05.10.2006 of the Supreme Court of Cassation and under the provisions of the old Code of Civil Procedure. Hence, the old practice of the Supreme Court of Cassation is no longer applicable. This was confirmed by an interpretative decision of the Supreme Court of Cassation adopted on 14/01/2013, according to which, the State is bound by the res judicata effect of judgments delivered in proceedings concerning the lawfulness of administrative acts adopted under the Use and Property on Agricultural Land Act and the Restitution of Forests and Lands from the Forest Fund Act. The judgment was translated, published and disseminated.

(Article 5 §§3+4)	The applicant is no longer in pre-trial detention. Concerning his appearance before trial judge, the case reveils an isolated erroneous application of domestic legal provisions. Current provisions in the Criminal Procedure Code concerning the examination of an appeal against remand in judicial stage of criminal proceedings specifically provide for a hearing by the competent court. However, it does not provide for the mandatory holding of a hearing by the higher courts. Domestic law leaves it to the discretion of the High Court to rule in chambers or organise a hearing. The Supreme Court of Cassation sent a circular letter to the higher courts to draw their attention to the ECHR requirements, i.e. the need to ensure at all stages of the dispute process of the lawfulness of detention respect the principle of equality of arms and the adversarial principle. The prosecutor should not have the privilege to submit comments to which the accused had not the opportunity to respond. Indeed, the appellate court must assess very carefully the need to hear the detained person. The judgment was translated, published and disseminated.

The prosecutor may prohibit the accused to leave the State only in case of suspicion of a serious intentional criminal offence (punishable by more than five years of imprisonment). The application of this measure is not automatic but depends on the circumstances of the case. It is imposed relatively seldom. The accused may request temporary lifting of the measure at any time during the pre-trial phase and the prosecutor is obliged to respond within three days from its submission. The refusal is subject to immediate appeal to the competent first-instance court. At the trial stage the temporary lifting of the ban may be requested in before the trial court. The accused is entitled to apply for a full revocation of the prohibition order before court at any time during both pre-trial and court proceedings, which is granted if there is no risk of flight abroad. National legislation provides an effective compensatory domestic remedy under Art.2 of the 1988 State and Municipalities Responsibility for Damages Act with regard to unlawful prohibition to leave the country and domestic courts award such compensation effectively (see Decision of the Plovdiv Appellate Court from 06.12.2010 under civil case № 916/2010). The issues of excessive length of proceedings and lack of effective remedies in this respect are examined in the context of the Kitov Dimitrov and Hamanov groups.

CM/ResDH(2013) 138	BGR / Marin Kostov	13801/07	24/10/2012 24/07/2012	Freedom of expression: Disproportionate interference due to a detainee's disciplinary punishment (14 days solitary confinement) for having complained to the prosecutor about the actions of prison officials. (Article 10)	The relevant legislation was changed. A new Execution of Punishments and Detention in Custody Act 2009 expressly provides that prisoners may not be subject to disciplinary punishment because of having made a request or lodged a complaint. At present, confinement in isolation cell of up to 14 days may be imposed by the prison governor; while the governors of penitentiary hostels may impose confinement of up to 5 days. The orders for disciplinary punishments issued by the prison governor may be appealed before the General Director, while the orders of the General Director may be appealed before the Minister of Justice. The appeal does not have an automatic suspensive effect, but the General Director or the Minister of Justice may decide to suspend the execution of the disciplinary punishment. The orders imposing solitary confinement to a disciplinary cell are subject to appeal before the district court, which has to examine the appeal does not have an automatic suspensive effect, but the court may decide to suspend the execution of the district court, which has to examine the appeal within 3 days in the presence of the detainee. The appeal does not have an automatic suspensive effect, but the court may decide to suspend the execution of the disciplinary punishment. The judgment was translated, published and disseminated.

(Article 6§3(a) and (b) taken together with Article 6§1)	The applicant did not submit any request for re-opening of proceedings. The amendment of Article 422 of the Code of Criminal Procedure introduced in 2011 allows persons in a position similar to that of the applicant to request the reopening of the criminal proceedings, in which the accused will have the possibility to defend himself against the charge retained according to the more lenient characterisation of the facts. Article 422 CCP also provides for reopening of criminal cases where substantial violations had been committed under Article 348 §1: violation of substantive law; serious violation of the procedural rules; manifestly unfair punishment. (Article 2 procedural limb)	A new Criminal Procedure Code 2006, in its Sections 74 and 75, governs the rights of victims of crime or their heirs granting their participation in preliminary investigations and trial court proceedings regardless of their constitution as civil parties and / or private accusers. Victims and their heirs have the following rights: to be protected and informed of his rights; be informed of the progress of the criminal proceedings; participate in criminal procedure as provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure; make requests, comments and objections; challenge acts of conclusion or suspension of the proceedings; have a lawyer. In 2010 a new provision ensured that the victim must be informed about opened preliminary investigations immediately. Articles 227-229 of the Criminal Procedure Code provide that, in cases where the offender was formally charged, victims of an offense (or their heirs) are entitled to be aware of survey results and make comments and suggestions. The prosecutor decides on requests, comments and objections of the victim. Other matters concerning the rights of victims of crime to participate effectively in the criminal proceedings are considered in the context of Angelova and Iliev group, especially in Dimitrova and Others. The judgment was translated, published and disseminated.

(Article 5§§1(e)+3+4+5; Articles 6 and 13)	The applicants have been released or sentenced to a term of imprisonment. The practice of shaving detainees' heads before confining them in disciplinary cells does not exist anymore. This was confirmed in a letter from 08/02/2005 by the General Director of "Execution of Punishments" to the Ministry of Justice. The new Execution of Punishments and Detention in Custody Act 2009 provides that prisoners may not be subject to disciplinary punishment because of having made a request or lodged a complaint. Thus, the legal ground on which the applicant's disciplinary punishment in isolation cell of up to 14 days may be imposed by the prison governors. The orders imposing solitary confinement to a disciplinary cell are subject to appeal before the regional court. The regional court has to examine the appeal within 3 days, in the presence of the detainee. The appeal does not have an automatic suspensive effect, but the court may decide to suspend the execution of the disciplinary punishment. General measures concerning detention on remand: see (ResDH(2000)109) Assenov and others and (CM/ResDH(2012)166) in Georgieva. Concerning placement in psychiatric hospital see CM/ResDH(2010)40 in Varbanov group. In 2012, the State and

The new wording of the provisions ensures that all persons subject to detention in contradiction with Art. 5 of the Convention have an enforceable right to compensation even in situations in which the detention is not considered unlawful under domestic law. The violations were found in cases from 1989 (when Cyprus accepted the individual right of petition) up to the present.	In all cases except Shacolas (47119/99) where the appeal court ordered a re-trial, proceedings are closed. Regulatory measures (in particular a series of circulars issued by the Supreme Court 1995- 2003) were adopted for the prevention of similar violations. Complaints concerning length of proceedings may be made under the new Law 2(I)/2010). It applies to cases which were pending at any stage before it came into force; thus applicants whose proceedings are concluded can still use this remedy. (Article 6 §§1+3c)	The applicant was released due to remission for good conduct under the relevant prison regulations. "The rights of persons arrested and detained law" 2005 provides that every person, immediately following arrest, has the right to communicate with their lawyer by telephone, and to communicate with a relative or other person. If under 18 years old, the arrested person has the right to inform a parent or guardian of his arrest or detention and place of detention. There is an obligation on the arresting police officer to inform the arrested person of his communication rights and to provide every facility and practical means necessary to exercise such rights before questioning. A police officer who infringes any of the above rights to communication is liable to criminal and disciplinary sanctions, including imprisonment. Civil proceedings may be brought against the State for compensation. Details of when the arrested person is informed of his communication rights, when he/she expresses an intention to avail himself/herself of such rights, and when he/she exercises them, must be recorded in the interrogation file. 					Social Welfare Department. Furthermore, it is the practice of the police – respecting persons under the age of 16 – to inform the Social Welfare Department when an investigation is over and to prepare a socioeconomic report on the minor and his/her family, before the file is transmitted to the Attorney-General for decision as to whether to prosecute or not. Before the file is so transmitted, it is studied by a committee comprising of a representative of the police and the Social Welfare Department which recommends to the Attorney-General whether or not the minor should be prosecuted. The trial court's confrontation with the applicant's defence lawyer is examined in the case of Kyprianou. The trial court's use of the confession obtained under police questioning was an isolated error. The judgment was translated, published and disseminated.
CM/ResDH(2013) 58	CZE / Adamicek and 3 other cases	35836/05	12/01/2011 12/10/2010	Access to and efficient functioning of justice: Denial of access to the Constitutional Court due to the lack of clear rules concerning the formalities and time-limits to be observed for a constitutional appeal following an appeal in cassation. The constitutional complaint against an appeal decision, contested in cassation before the Supreme Court, was rejected as belated by the Constitutional Court on the ground that the applicant had set out its reasons differently in the Court of Appeal and Supreme Court. (Article 6 § 1)	In 2 cases the reopening of proceedings before the Constitutional Court in accordance with Section 119 of the Constitutional Court Act (CCA) was granted as the appeal was directed against ordinary courts' decisions in criminal proceedings. For general measures see CM/ResDH(2010)68 in Drahorád and Drahorádová. Furthermore, in 2012, the Constitutional Court repealed as unconstitutional Section 237 § 1(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure (CCP) according to which an appeal on points of law is admissible if the decision of the court of appeal concerns a question "of crucial legal importance". The Constitutional Court held, among other things, that the contested provision did not define clearly the situations where an appeal on points of law was admissible. A new law entered into force on 01/01/2013, providing that before lodging a constitutional appeal an applicant will have to exhaust all remedies afforded by law for the protection of his/her rights, including those whose admissibility depends on the discretion of the competent authorities. A constitutional appeal should not be declared inadmissible as lodged out of time if lodged within two month time limit running from the delivery of the decision of the Supreme Court on the appeal on points of law.

The Code of Execution of Criminal Sentences of 1997, with respect to the issue of monitoring of correspondence of persons deprived of their liberty was amended in September 2003 and in January 2012. Amendments to Article 217 of the Code of Execution of Criminal Sentences in 2010 provide that a detainee is entitled to at least one family visit per month. They indicate conditions for refusing a family visit and provide an appeal procedure. According to a further amendment in 2011, a visit in direct contact of detainee and visitor can be organised. Since then, the rules governing succession to lease have been included in the Civil Code in Article 691: In the event of a tenant's death, a person who had lived in de facto cohabitation with the tenant shall also succeed to the tenancy agreement. Thus, in contrast to previous regulation, the current law does not foresee that the cohabitation must be "marital". Domestic courts recognize same-sex partners as de facto cohabitation" on the Court's findings in the present case. (Article 8)	Amendments made to the Caravan Sites Act 1968 by the Housing Act 2004 enable courts to suspend, for up to twelve months at a time, the enforcement of a possession order made in respect of local authority Gypsy/Traveller sites. In addition, the Housing and Regeneration Act 2008, which received Royal Assent on 22/07/2008, amends the Mobile Homes Act 1983 so as to confer greater security of tenure on those living on residential caravan sites. Section 318 of the 2008 Act amends the definition of "protected site" in the Mobile Homes Act 1983, extending the protections in the 1983 Act to local authority Gypsy and Traveller sites. In order to evict a Gypsy or Traveller from their site a local authority will need to satisfy the court that (i) a term of the agreement to occupy a pitch has been breached and the occupier has failed to comply with a notice to remedy the breach, and (ii) it is reasonable to terminate the agreement. 				(Article 8)	Rights Act 1998, to immediately repeal and replace section 44 with new, circumscribed powers was made. The Home Secretary made an urgent remedial order containing new provisions, which came into force on 18/03/2011. The Protections of Freedoms Act 2012 places the powers provided by the Terrorism Act 2000 (Remedial) Order 2011 on a permanent footing. Its Section 59 repeals the stop and search powers in sections 44 to 47 of the 2000 Act. Section 60 and Schedule 5 to that Act introduce new and tightly circumscribed powers. The new powers enable the police to stop and search people and vehicles with no suspicion only in exceptional circumstances, where a senior police officer reasonably suspects that an act of terrorism will take place and where the powers are considered necessary to prevent such an act. In addition to this significantly higher threshold for the police to authorise the use of the powers, Section 62 provides for a Code of Practice for terrorism stop and search powers. The Codes of Practice in Great Britain and Northern Ireland came into force on 10/05/2012.

(Article 6 §1)	Diplomatic assurances were obtained from Jordan against the risk of evidence obtained by torture being used against the applicant at his retrial. Those assurances were challenged: In November 2012, the Special Immigration Appeals Commission concluded that the assurances did not remove the risk. That decision was upheld by the Court of Appeal in March 2013. A Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty in Criminal Matters with Jordan aiming notably at eliminating the risk that torture evidence would be used came into force on 01/07/2013 binding the Jordanian State Security Court. Once the Treaty was in force, the applicant confirmed his readiness to return voluntarily to Jordan, in correspondence between the authorities and his lawyers. A Prison Service Instruction on prisoner communications sets out that: "Correspondence between a prisoner and a registered medical practitioner must be handled in confidence but only to the extent that the registered medical practitioner is acting in a professional capacity and the correspondence directly relates to the treatment of the prisoner". In respect of England and Wales, a Statutory Instrument 2010 amended Rule 20 of the Prison Rules 1999 and Rule 27 of the Young Offender Institution Rules 2000 to provide that a prisoner may correspond confidentially with a registered medical practitioner who has treated the prisoner for a life threatening condition, and such correspondence may not be opened, read or stopped unless the Prison Governor has "reasonable cause" to believe that the contents do not relate to the treatment of that condition.
