Key Precursors

1. Poverty, Economic Disparity and Inequality
1. Gender Norms and Beliefs

Poverty is not the main reason for OSEC proliferation

OSEC is primarily fueled by DEMAND from online child sexual predators

How prevalent is OSEC in the region?

Key Challenges and Gaps

1. Victim identification
2. Gaps in Domestic Legislation
3. Inadequate/Inefficient Law Enforcement Response to OSEC
4. Incomplete, or Non-Existential National Plans of Action
5. Lack of Cooperation from Private sector companies

Recommendations

1. Harmonize National Legislations
2. Enhance Interconnection of law Enforcement Data Bases in the region
3. Strengthen Law Enforcement Response to OSEC
4. Implement National Plans of Action
5. Implement clear regulations for Private sector companies

Conclusion

OSEC represents a heinous crime that continues to plague Southeast Asia despite international efforts to combat it. While many advances have been made to fight the phenomenon, the problem continues relatively unabated. It is hoped that our agenda in the region, as summarized in the ASEAN Declaration to Prevent and Combat Cybercrime, particularly online sexual exploitation of children, may move forward and result in coordinated global approach which is the key to fight this transnational crime.
