

Looking beyond

10 years of Community Foundations in Romania

Context

Increasing public interest and pressure on governments to make good choices and change the 'system' of how politics is made;
Generational change: people who were educated in post-communism have leadership positions in business, government and NGOs;
Some fiscal incentives for corporate giving, but no incentives for individual giving.

Context (continued)

Growth in skills and talents and people's interest (through education and technology) to put them to a broader, community use;

Some slow increase in private assets that can be invested in communities;

Corporate giving still allows for the higher contributions by donor now, but we expect a change towards private assets generated through entrepreneurial activities.
