Motivation

"Volonteuropa has been working for 36 years to encourage active citizens committed to ensuring greater social justice in Europe. (<https://volonteuropa.eu/>).

In putting forward my candidature, Volonteuropa is demonstrating its belief in education and culture as means of building more inclusive, collaborative, equitable and sustainable societies.

The European ideal, the promotion of democracy, peace and solidarity, are the factors that motivated my membership of this INGO, which considers volunteering to be a non-formal education tool for emancipating people in a mutually supportive environment.

As the eldest in a family of six children, sharing and working as a team have always been part of my daily life. After completing my studies in public law and political sciences, I quite naturally decided to devote my energy and vitality to developing solidarity and citizenship-based initiatives at both local and European level.

In my job, I am responsible for youth issues and youth involvement and for running a network of 500 public education associations affiliated to the Ligue de l'Enseignement du Rhône et de la Métropole de Lyon in France.

I have been an active member of the Conference of INGOs since the age of 26, working on various subjects (youth, communication, digital issues, etc.). I wish to continue this work and to confirm my action by becoming more deeply involved so as to unite our members and get them involved in establishing a joint project with a real impact.
