▼ 1.1 Commentary*Commentary (click to collaps)*Integrated Approach

Presently, Portugal central administration bodies responsible for the Portuguese Cultural Heritage are now reunited in one big department. This means that the previous institutes for museums, for archaeology and for restoration and other services, like the National Photographs Archive, Archaeological Laboratories, are now reunited on the General Directorate for Cultural Heritage (DGPC). This department mission is to assure the management, conservation, restoration and safeguard of the immovable, movable and immaterial Portuguese heritage as well as develop and execute the museums national policies. Meanwhile there are Regional Cultural Directorates on the North, Centre, Alentejo and Algarve which are responsible for the follow up of all the actions related with the cultural heritage on their specific geographic area in articulation with the central government service: General Directorate for Cultural Heritage.

2.2.B - The law obliges that the finds recovered from an archaeological work, and its documentation, will be incorporated on a Museum after a maximum deadline of two years after the work is completed. Until then, finds and its documentation are usually kept together with the trusteeship. The DGPC, the state institution with legal responsibilities for the heritage, obliges the archaeologist to hand in the reports from archaeological work, becoming also the detainer of such documentation, but without the remains or finds.

Archaeological heritage – the records of archaeological finds are reported to the competent authorities by the finders, whoever might be. Then the records of archaeological heritage is exclusively made by professionals with qualifications, that have the permits granted by the DGPC to act according the law. For the underwater archaeological finds, the system used is different, once the report of the finds is made to the competent authorities the record is exclusively made by state technicians, working on the DGPC. Finally, al the data is registered in the DGPC database - Endovélico.

Archaeological heritage – The preventive archaeological work has public funding only in the public building and infrastructure projects, such as dams, electricity network, road and train network, etc.

On the last few years, different central administration departments were joined together into the General Directorate for the Cultural Heritage. Therefore, the financial data available only concern the year 2012, where the total 3.285.694€ budget for immovable heritage (archaeological, architectural and landscape) was divided on 6 items:

- Preservation - 3.103.753€
- Conservation and restoration - 103.307€
- Conservation and maintenance - 4.613€
- National Plan of Archaeology Conservation (PNTA) - 17.803€
- Archaeology publications - 34.915€
- Other publications - 21.303€

7.1.A Brief Overviw

Granada:

It is implemented in Portuguese legislation since 2001 (art.º 45º da Lei nº 107/2001 de 8 de Stembro; Decreto-lei nº 140/2009 de 15 de Junho). In the last 2 years Portugal developed an intense activity concerning immovable heritage protection.

Valetta:

Since 2001 (Lei nº 107/2001 de 8 de Stembro) where in the article 102 is previewed a criminal procedure related with illicit traffic of legal protected monuments and sites.

Florence:

This is not on cultural heritage legislation but on the planning and environmental legislation.

Faro:

The convention principles are present on the Portuguese legislation and policies concerning cultural heritage management. Namely, the implementation of "Portal of Archeologist" in the web site of the General Directorate for Cultural Heritage, that allows an overview of all archaeological work, as well as the on line access to the inventory of archeological sites and of monuments and sites with legal protection, reflects the art. 14th of the convention.

7.2.A Are visions or strategies for heritage going to change in the short and medium term?

7.2.A Vertical Tabs

Integrated Approach

Short and medium term changes:

- New state/governmental organisation of the cultural departments due to the severe financial constraints. Decreasing of the private support on all cultural activities: conservation, restoration, exhibitions, etc.
- Increasing of the integrated approach at all levels not only between technicians from different areas but also between different actors: private developers, public, municipal and local authorities and organizations.
- Increasing of the awareness about the environmental friendly techniques within the conservation and restoration work fields.
- Increasing of the awareness of the cultural values attached to the landscape and the crucial role on the sustainable cultural heritage conservation.
- Revision of the listing cultural heritage criteria. The system started over 100 years ago and went across many changes and points of view. Now it is recognized that is necessary to establish criteria for reviewing the existent list and their protection areas and new criteria for the future listed cultural heritage.
