THE COUNCIL OF EUROPE AND THE AGENDA 2030 FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development was launched by a UN summit in New York on 25-27 September 2015 and is aimed at ending poverty in all its forms. The UN 2030 Agenda envisages "a world of universal respect for human rights and human dignity, the rule of law, justice, equality and non-discrimination". It is grounded in the Universal Declaration on Human Rights and international human rights treaties and emphasises the responsibilities of all states to respect, protect and promote human rights. There is a strong emphasis on the empowerment of women and of vulnerable groups such as children, young people, persons with disabilities, older persons, refugees, internally displaced persons and migrants. The Agenda's 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs – also called "Global Goals"), and their 169 targets, aim at eradicating poverty in all forms and "seek to realize the human rights of all and achieve gender equality".

The Council of Europe contributes to achieving these goals through most of its sectors, and through work funded by the ordinary budget as well as with extra-budgetary contributions. SDG number 16 'Peace, justice and strong institutions' is particularly important for the Council of Europe, with virtually every sector of the Organisation being involved in achieving the goal.

It goes without saying that the sustainable development agenda is particularly important for the Organisation's development cooperation programmes. The Council of Europe's new Project Management Methodology (PMM) is also there to ensure that methods as well as the substance of these programmes contribute to achieving the agenda, including through a Human Rights Approach. Overall, the cooperation programmes carried out via the Office of the Directorate General of Programmes (ODGP) are currently worth €170-200 Million.

Below an overview of the Council of Europe's contribution to the UN 2030 Agenda for sustainable development is presented.

These projects are often part of country-specific action plans / cooperation documents. Country-specific actions plans and co-operation priorities, endorsed by the Committee of Ministers, are the main instrument for articulating co-operation priorities with beneficiary countries and the resources required to achieve them. Their goal is to support the reforms in the beneficiary countries which will bring the legislation, institutions and practice further in line with European standards in the areas of human rights, the rule of law and democracy, and therefore support their efforts in meeting their obligations as Council of Europe member States. In meeting their objectives, the cooperation documents will also contribute to the implementation of the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development notably to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

The Council of Europe's new Project Management Methodology (PMM) is also there to ensure that methods as well as the substance of these programmes contribute to achieving the agenda, including through a Human Rights Approach. Overall, the cooperation programmes carried out via the Office of the Directorate General of Programmes (ODGP) are currently worth €170-200 Million.

The UN 2030 Agenda envisages "a world of universal respect for human rights and human dignity, the rule of law, justice, equality and non-discrimination". These projects are often part of country-specific action plans / cooperation documents. Country-specific action plans and co-operation priorities, endorsed by the Committee of Ministers, are the main instrument for articulating co-operation priorities with beneficiary countries and the resources required to achieve them. Their goal is to support the reforms in the beneficiary countries which will bring the legislation, institutions and practice further in line with European standards in the areas of human rights, the rule of law and democracy, and therefore support their efforts in meeting their obligations as Council of Europe member States. In meeting their objectives, the cooperation documents will also contribute to the implementation of the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development notably to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

THE COUNCIL OF EUROPE AND THE AGENDA 2030 FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development was launched by a UN summit in New York on 25-27 September 2015 and is aimed at ending poverty in all its forms. The UN 2030 Agenda envisages "a world of universal respect for human rights and human dignity, the rule of law, justice, equality and non-discrimination". It is grounded in the Universal Declaration on Human Rights and international human rights treaties and emphasises the responsibilities of all states to respect, protect and promote human rights. There is a strong emphasis on the empowerment of women and of vulnerable groups such as children, young people, persons with disabilities, older persons, refugees, internally displaced persons and migrants. The Agenda's 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs – also called "Global Goals"), and their 169 targets, aim at eradicating poverty in all forms and "seek to realize the human rights of all and achieve gender equality".

The Council of Europe contributes to achieving these goals through most of its sectors, and through work funded by the ordinary budget as well as with extra-budgetary contributions. SDG number 16 'Peace, justice and strong institutions' is particularly important for the Council of Europe, with virtually every sector of the Organisation being involved in achieving the goal.

It goes without saying that the sustainable development agenda is particularly important for the Organisation's development cooperation programmes. The Council of Europe's new Project Management Methodology (PMM) is also there to ensure that methods as well as the substance of these programmes contribute to achieving the agenda, including through a Human Rights Approach. Overall, the cooperation programmes carried out via the Office of the Directorate General of Programmes (ODGP) are currently worth €170-200 Million.

Below an overview of the Council of Europe's contribution to the UN 2030 Agenda for sustainable development is presented.
