BACKGROUND AND JUSTIFICATION

New information and communication technologies (ICTs) provide an environment for children to enjoy and exercise their rights. At the same time, the use of ICTs expose children to risks to their safety, security and privacy, particularly risks of online child sexual exploitation and abuse (hereinafter OCSEA).

The Council of Europe Strategy for the Rights of the Child \(2016-2021\) identifies the rights of the child in the digital environment as a priority area for action by Council of Europe bodies and committees as well as by member states, supporting an improved implementation of global and European regional standards to end OCSEA.

Numerous challenges have been identified in this area, including the need for:

- a comprehensive and up to date understanding of OCSEA among decision-makers and competent authorities among Council of Europe member States;
- policy and legislative reforms to address OCSEA and the specific risks through the development of a comprehensive legal framework to investigate offences and ensure the protection of children, developed with child participation, in accordance with the WeProtect Model National Response;
- strengthened interagency cooperation between competent authorities at national level;
- effective capacity building for law enforcement and judiciary;
- integrated services to ensure effective investigation, prosecution and support to child victims; and
- efficient networking and international cooperation against OCSEA at pan-European level.

The available evidence shows that the production and distribution of child sexual abuse material transcends national boundaries meaning that an international co-ordinated response to this crime is necessary.<sup>1</sup> Perpetrators are constantly adapting their use of networking sites and Darknet technologies to seek to avoid detection, reporting and prosecution. The Committee of the Parties to the Convention for the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse (Lanzarote Committee) and international law enforcement agencies have identified online solicitation, sexual extortion, sexting and self-generated content amongst the most worrying trends of OCSEA today. Interagency responses and global initiatives such as the WeProtect Global Alliance become all the more crucial to prevent and combat OCSEA.

OBJECTIVES AND EXPECTED OUTCOMES

The project will address the contextual challenges identified at pan-European and country level in beneficiary countries by promoting, facilitating and supporting national efforts and actions to prevent and combat child sexual exploitation and abuse facilitated by ICTs. Actions will support global efforts in this area, the implementation of relevant international and European standards, in particular the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse (Lanzarote Convention), and 8 of the capabilities identified in the WePROTECT Model National Response.<sup>2</sup>

The project includes 3 mutually reinforcing components, each aimed at:

- 1) setting up enabling environments for cross-sector, multidisciplinary collaboration at national and regional levels, through strengthening national governance structures

- 2) supporting legislative and procedural reforms, training and improved capacities of law enforcement officials, judiciary and prosecutors and promoting multi-disciplinary interagency cooperation for end-to-end support for victims;

This project also supports the implementation of international conventions, in particular the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, as well as its Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography, as well as the Lanzarote Convention (CETS 201) and Council of Europe Convention on Cybercrime and its additional protocol concerning the criminalisation of acts of a racist and xenophobic nature(CETS 185) and the Committee of Ministers CM/Rec \(2018\)7 on Guidelines to respect, protect and fulfil the rights of the child in the digital environment. These instruments provide a benchmark for member states to review domestic legislation, policies and practices, ensure a victim-focused approach and encourage transnational multi-disciplinary and inter-agency co-operation to enhance effective investigations and prosecutions.

The project will also support member states to empower children to exercise their rights in a safe way in the digital environment through awareness raising and prevention activities. Child participation and the involvement of civil society will be cross-cutting throughout the action.

 	This project contributes to the landmark commitment by world leaders to end abuse, exploitation, trafficking and all forms of violence and abuse of children by 2030, as part of the UN Sustainable Development Goals, in particular SDG 16.2 (End abuse, exploitation, trafficking and all forms of violence and torture against children) and SDG 5.2 (Eliminate all forms of violence against all women and girls in the public and private sectors).

IMPLEMENTING ARRANGEMENTS

This project is implemented by the Children's Rights Division of the Council of Europe, in co-operation with the Cybercrime Office (C-PROC) in Romania. Other participating partners within the Council of Europe include: the Parliamentary Assembly, the Ad hoc Committee for the Rights of the Child, the Lanzarote Committee, the Cybercrime Division, and the Pan-European Network of National Training institutions for Judges and Prosecutors (the HELP Network).

All countries benefiting from project support will be invited to appoint a national coordinator and where necessary, a project team consisting of representatives of the main counterpart beneficiary institutions who will act as the focal point for each focus country. The project steering group will be composed of the focal points of the 10 focus countries and the Secretariat. Steering group meetings will be convened on an annual basis to provide strategic guidance for the successful implementation of the project.

The Council of Europe will also seek partnerships with key institutions and organisations in member states and beyond which have specific experience in matters related to OCSEA and can contribute to the project.
