F O R E W O R D

The European Audiovisual Observatory is pleased to contribute this report to the conference on the future of cinema and the audiovisual sector within the framework of European Union enlargement.

When the Observatory was created, 10 years ago, it would have been difficult, and perhaps even impossible, to obtain detailed information on the distribution of films in the European Union on the scale presented here. The development of the LUMIERE database on admissions to films distributed in Europe, together with the invaluable contribution of our network of correspondents in the 35 Member States of the Observatory, has allowed us, we believe, to make significant progress towards our goal of improving the transparency of information flows in the film and audiovisual sector.

We are honoured to contribute to this debate organised in the context of the Greek Presidency of the European Union and to the important work accomplished by the European Community in the development of the audiovisual sector in Europe.

Wolfgang Closs

Executive Director
European Audiovisual Observatory

1. European cinema – an overview of trends in 2002

Text of a press release published on 5th May 2003 by the European Audiovisual Observatory.

EUROPEAN CINEMA ATTENDANCE STAGNATES AS LOCAL FILMS FAIL TO TRAVEL

- Growth in cinema attendance in the European Union in 2002 slowed to just 1%, with Great Britain among the most dynamic markets
- Overall market share for films produced in Europe reached an estimated 27% in 2002, a drop in relation to 2001 (31%) but still an improvement on the score achieved in 2000 (23%)
- The overall volume of feature film production remained stable in 2002, as British, French and German producers turned increasingly to co-production

Production volume holds stable in 2002...

On the basis of available data, the European Audiovisual Observatory estimates that 625 films were produced in the European Union in 2002, a result very similar to that posted in 2001 (628 films). Countries that showed an increase in production levels were Austria (an estimated 26 films as opposed to 12 in 2001), Spain (80 entirely national films as opposed to 67 in 2001) and Italy (96 national films as opposed to 68 in 2001). Production levels dipped slightly in France (from 172 films of French initiative in 2001 to 163 in 2002), the United Kingdom (64 national or majority co-produced films in 2001, 60 in 2002), whereas the decline was more pronounced in Portugal (14 films in 2001, 6 in 2002). British, French, and German producers showed renewed interest in co-productions, whereas in Italy and Spain the principal increase in volume came from entirely nationally financed films.

British films remain those with the highest budgets, reaching an average of GBP 5.99 million (EUR 9.98 million) in 2002, while French average production costs also rose to reach EUR 4.44 million (an increase of just 1%). The year 2001 had also seen a sharp drop in the number of US productions shooting in Great Britain, with only 3 films shot there in 2001 as opposed to 11 in the preceding year. Figures for 2002 show an improved situation, with 6 Hollywood productions availing of British production facilities.

...while growth in admissions slows

Total admissions in the European Union had grown by an exceptional 10% in 2001. Growth slowed in 2002, with a 0.5% increase bringing total admissions to an estimated 933 million. Results were stable or positive in the majority of countries with Finland showing the strongest growth (18.5%) chiefly due to recovery from the very disappointing result obtained in 2001. It was the United Kingdom market that registered the strongest performance, reaching a total of 176 million tickets sold (a 13% increase on 2001), thus becoming the second largest market in terms of admissions in the European Union after France. The most important declines were registered in Germany (-7.9%) and in Spain (-4%) and estimated figures for Belgium indicate an expected 3% drop.

Among non-European Union countries Estonia, the Russian Federation, Slovenia and Switzerland all registered positive results, with Estonia (19.5%) and Slovenia (12.9%) in particular showing strong growth. Attendances fell back slightly in Hungary (-4.3%), Norway (-3.5%) and in Poland (-1.1%) and more significantly in Romania (-7.2%), Latvia (-7%) and Lithuania (-19%). A sharp drop was also registered in Turkey, where estimations for 2002 indicate a fall of around 16% in cinema admissions, a decline that would appear to be principally due to the lack of strong local films released during the year.

European films continue to perform well on their own markets, but results outside national markets are less encouraging

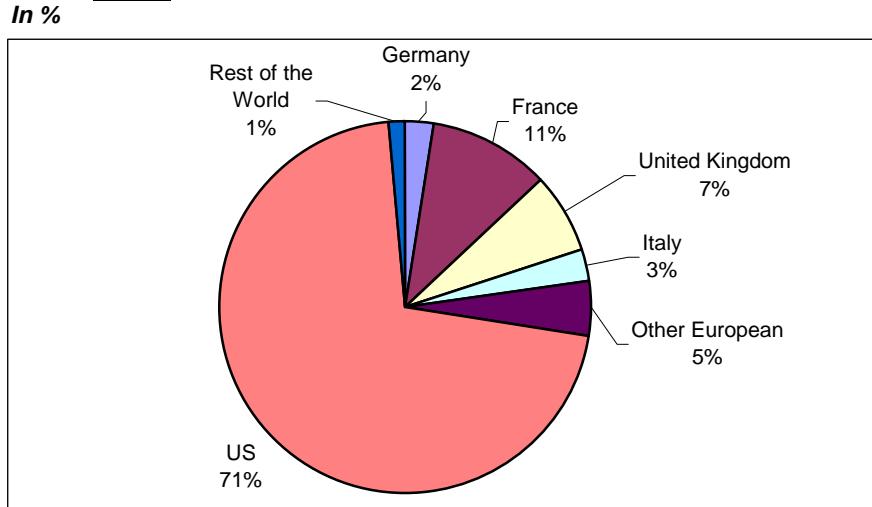

According to provisional estimates from the European Audiovisual Observatory, market share for European films in the European Union reached around 27% in 2002, a decline in relation to the exceptional 2001 figure (31%) but still a significant gain on the figures achieved in 2000 (23%). The market share of national films on their own market remained relatively stable, at 19.5% (a 3% drop in relation to 2001) but the performance of European films outside national markets was less encouraging, falling back by an estimated 27% in relation to last year's excellent results. Consequently American films recovered ground lost in the European Union in 2001, obtaining in 2002 a market share of 71% (65% in 2001).

Franco-German co-production, Astérix & Obélix: Mission Cléopâtre was the European film to obtain most admissions in 2002, and only two other European films (both British – US co-productions) appeared in the overall Top 20 list for the year. Astérix & Obélix circulated relatively successfully in Europe in 2002, yet just 26% of the total of 19.7 million admissions to the film were registered outside its home market. Though the final total for the film should be slightly higher, it is interesting to compare this result with the final result for its predecessor, Astérix & Obélix contre César. This film, first released in 1999, registered 55% of a total of 19.1 million admissions in markets outside of France. Bridget Jones' Diary, the most successful European film of 2001, sold 63% of its total of 26.5 million tickets outside of the British home market.

2. Distribution of films from Central and Eastern Europe on the European Union Market

It is probably one of the saddest paradoxes of recent years: while the return to democracy in the countries of Central and Eastern Europe at the end of the 1980s aroused enormous hopes of an opening up and cultural cooperation, it must be recognised that the market reality has been more than disappointing. Only 49 films produced in Central and Eastern Europe since 1996 have received effective commercial distribution in at least one of the fifteen Member States of the Union during the last seven years. This represents 0.9% of the new films distributed in the European Union during this period.

These 49 films obtained 2.4 million admissions in the Union, or a market share of 0.05%. Moreover, it should be appreciated that almost two thirds of these admissions were achieved by a single film, Kolya (CZ/GB/FR) in 1997! Of the twenty films which achieved the largest number of admissions in the European Union, only four of the films were produced in 2001 or 2002, which illustrates disturbingly that even this small trickle is tending to dry up.

Czech films are those which benefit relatively from access to the European Union market, since of the 49 films, 16 originated in the Czech Republic while only 9 Polish films and 8 Hungarian films have been distributed. Four Latvian films and 6 Romanian films have been distributed in at least one country. Czech films obtained 70.6% of the admissions obtained by films from these countries, Hungarian films 10.6%, Polish films 8.4%, Latvian films 6.5% and Romanian films 2.9%.

Thanks to the success of Kolya, Germany appears to be the most receptive market for films from the East; 40.6% of the total European Union admissions to films from Central and Eastern Europe were registered in this market. But it is in fact France which offers the greatest opportunities to films from the East, since 25 of the 49 films have been distributed there, against only 9 in Germany, Italy and the Netherlands and 6 in the United Kingdom.

3. Distribution of films from the Mediterranean basin on the European Union market.

During the period 1996-2002, 57 films from the countries of the Mediterranean basin non-members of the European Union have received commercial distribution in at least one of the Member States of the Union. These 57 films obtained 3.6 million admissions in the Union, or a market share of 0.076%. The four main exporters are Turkey and Israel (10 films), Morocco (9 films) and Egypt (8 films).

The most striking phenomenon about the films from these countries is the position held by France as their potential market: more than two thirds (67%) of the admissions obtained by these films in the European Union market have been in France alone. With only 16% of European Union admissions for these films, Germany comes a distant second, followed by Italy (9%).

Only 19 African films produced between 1996 and 2002 were distributed in the European Union during the same period. France was the principal zone of distribution with 13 of the titles distributed and Great Britain was a distant second, with just 4 films distributed during the period. Films from South Africa were those most distributed (6 titles).

The market share for African films produced between 1996 and 2002 and distributed on the European Union market during that period was a tiny 0.003%. Of these admissions the overwhelming majority (88.5%) were in France, with Great Britain the second most active market at 9.5% of admissions to African films, mostly accounted for by admissions to South African productions.

¹ This analysis excludes those North African countries already reviewed in the section on Mediterranean countries

5. Distribution of Latin-American films on the European Union market.

91 Latin-American films have been distributed in at least one country of the European Union between 1996 and 2002. Three countries are the main exporters: Argentina (33 films), Mexico (19 films) and Brazil (17 films). Films from Latin-American countries obtained almost 9.8 million admissions in the European Union, or a market share of 0.21 %.

Of the three principal exporting countries it is Argentina which has obtained the greatest share of the European Union market: 42.4% thanks chiefly to the success on the Spanish market of El hijo de la novia, an Argentinian-Spanish co-production, directed by the Argentinian Juan José Campanello. This film sold 1.6 million tickets in Spain in 2001/2002. Three other Latin-American films had successful European runs in the seven years covered here: the Brazilian film Central do Brasil (Walter Salles), the Mexican/US co-production Y tu mamá también (Alfonso Cuarón) and Amores Perros (Alejandro González Iñárritu), a Mexican film.

The market share of Hispanophone films is divided basically between Argentina (42.5%), Mexico (23.3%) and Cuba (8.6%). Some films from these countries have been distributed in several European markets. Films from Peru, Bolivia, Colombia, Chile and one each from the Republic of San Domingo and Uruguay share the remainder of the market, but in most cases these films have only been distributed in Spain and/or France and/or Italy.

As might be expected, Spain constitutes the most receptive market for Latin-American films, which obtain in that country more than half of their Union admissions (60.8%). The market position of France (14.3% of Union admissions) and that of Italy (6.9%) confirm the importance of the Latin area for the reception of South American films in Europe. However the relatively elevated share of admissions recorded in Great Britain (8.1%) should be noted: this is essentially due to the success of Central do Brasil and two recent Mexican films Y tu mamá también and Amores Perros.

200 films from Asian countries were distributed in the European Union during the period 1996 to 2002. Unsurprisingly Japan was the most prolific exporter with 61 films, followed by Iran with 31 titles and China (27 films). These films accounted for 54.7 millions admissions in the 15 European Union countries.

The market share for Asian films produced between 1996 and 2002 and distributed in the European Union market during that period was of 1.16%. Almost a third (32.3%) of admissions to these films were registered in France, followed by Germany with 19.2%, and Great Britain with 16.3%.

61 Japanese films were distributed in the European Union and these films accounted for 56% of the total admissions for Asian films. It should be noted that of the total admissions to Asian films, the three Japanese Pokémon titles distributed during the period accounted for more than a third of admissions (34%) and that these titles accounted for 60% of the total admissions for Japanese films.

Methodology – the LUMIERE database

The LUMIERE database provides a systematic compilation of available data on admissions to films released in European cinemas since 1996. The database is the result of the collaboration between the European Audiovisual Observatory and the various specialised national sources as well as the MEDIA Plus Programme of the European Union. The data provided in this report covers films produced during the period 1996-2002 and distributed during that period in one or more of the 35 Member States of the European Audiovisual Observatory. In the case of co-productions, film nationality is allocated on the basis of the country of the majority co-producing partner.

The EUROPEAN AUDIOVISUAL OBSERVATORY

Set up in December 1992, the European Audiovisual Observatory's goal is to gather and diffuse information on the audiovisual industry in Europe. The Observatory is a European public service body comprised of 35 member states and the European Community, represented by the European Commission. It operates within the legal framework of the Council of Europe and works alongside a number of partner and professional organisations from within the industry, together with a network of correspondents. In addition to contributions to conferences, other major activities are the publication of Yearbooks, newsletters and reports, compilation and management of databases, and the provision of information through the Observatory's Internet site (<http://www.obs.coe.int>).
