1. Fives studies identifying main obstacles to justice for women in the original 5 EaP countries
   - Still de jure discrimination of women. e.g. labour legislation restricts women’s access to certain professions; women not allowed to do night work
   - Anti-discrimination laws need to be strengthened, but good examples in the region (e.g. Georgia – notion of multiple discrimination)
   - Even when it exists, limited use of anti-discrimination legislation on the ground of sex (good examples: Equality Council in Rep. Moldova and Public Defender’s Office of Georgia)
   - Limited use of international standards in judicial decisions (e.g. only 18 judicial acts in Ukraine contain references to the CEDAW, mostly by applicants)
   - Indirect discrimination of women
   - Employment area: access of fathers to parental leave; determination of alimony and payment of alimony; unlawful dismissal or refusal to hire pregnant women
   - Significant underrepresentation of women in the judiciary in Armenia and Azerbaijan
   - Violence against women: not all forms are criminalised; severe under-reporting of crimes of violence against women; very few convictions of rape
   - Gender stereotypes and bias in the justice system (e.g. investigation of sexual violence)
