Strasbourg 16.12.2015 – Following reports and allegations of human rights violations against migrants and refugees in Europe, Secretary General Thorbjørn Jagland is appointing a Special Representative on Migration and Refugees.

"I am alarmed by reports of ill-treatment of migrants and refugees across Europe today. Migrants and refugees in Council of Europe member states have the same fundamental rights as anyone else under the European Convention on Human Rights. We have an obligation to protect their rights, and, together with our international partner organisations, we need to address violations where and when they occur", said Secretary General J

The Special Representative will undertake fact-finding missions, liaise with international partners including the UNHCR, IOM, UNICEF, EU, FRONTEX and r with these organisations.

The Special Representative's objective is to collect and analyse information on the human rights situation of migrants and refugees in Europe. This will enable the Council of Europe to provide better assistance and support to member states, especially in locations where a sudden increase in migrants and refugees poses serious challenges to the protection of their fundamental rights, in particular Article 3 "Inhuman and degrading treatments" and Article 5 "Right to liberty and security".

Details of the appointment and mission of the Special Representative on Migration and Refugees will be announced shortly.
