BACKGROUND AND JUSTIFICATION

The European Union and the Council of Europe supported Eastern Partnership countries between 2011 and 2014 through the CyberCrime@EAP I project. Two follow up projects, CyberCrime@EAP II and CyberCrime@EAP III, were launched in May and December 2015, with focus respectively on international cooperation and public-private partnerships on cybercrime and electronic evidence. All countries – with the exception of Belarus – are Parties to the Budapest Convention on Cybercrime and are thus members of the Cybercrime Convention Committee (T-CY).

Despite progress achieved under these two projects, the Report on “Cybercrime strategies, procedural powers and specialised institutions in the Eastern Partnership region – state of play”, prepared under the Cybercrime@Eastern Partnership projects in June 2017, has noted that further improvements are required in the region concerning:

- 1. Strategic approaches and policies on cybercrime and electronic evidence: There is a lack of strategic approach to countering cybercrime and making use of electronic evidence in criminal proceedings. Criminal justice systems lack resources and capacities to prevent, investigate, prosecute and adjudicate not only cybercrime but the growing number of other offences involving electronic evidence – that is, lacking resources and capacities in terms of fully-fledged, operational cybercrime units in law enforcement authorities.
- 2. Procedural law powers on cybercrime and electronic evidence (major gaps in implementation of Budapest Convention in this respect): Criminal justice authorities need the powers to secure electronic evidence to investigate cybercrime and other offences entailing electronic evidence to bring offenders to justice and maintain the rule of law also in cyberspace. The procedural powers of the Budapest Convention remain to be fully implemented in most of the countries of the Eastern Partnership, which are important preconditions for domestic investigations involving electronic evidence but also for international and public-private cooperation.
- 3. Division of competencies between security services and criminal police: Some EAP states have both security service and regular police/Ministry of the Interior units designated as investigative authorities for cybercrime, sometimes with competing and unclear divisions of powers or investigative jurisdiction. Cybercrime investigative powers are often divided between the police units and special investigative agencies that operate beyond police/Ministry of the Interior structures. These instances of uncertainty contribute directly to lack of efficiency expected of fully-fledged, operational cybercrime units in law enforcement authorities.

4. Problems in international cooperation due to gaps in domestic procedural law: There are obvious gaps in legal regulations as well as practice of preservation, definitions of subscriber information vs. traffic data; incoming or outgoing international preservation requests (Article 29 Budapest Convention) are often not followed by mutual legal assistance requests for the production of data; moreover, there are often no formal modalities for informing States requesting preservation of a necessity of mutual legal assistance request. This contributes delays and inefficiency of international cooperation on cybercrime and electronic evidence;

5. Cooperation with multi-national service providers: Direct contact with foreign or multinational service providers is an increasingly important option for all Eastern Partnership States, both for police cooperation units and mutual legal assistance authorities. Proper legal regulation is essential for this process, since foreign/multinational service providers do mostly cooperate on a voluntary basis and lack of clear and proper basis in national law could be one of the major reasons influencing this important aspect of public-private cooperation.

APPROACH

CyberCrime@EAP 2018 project is a direct follow-up to the previous capacity building efforts in the Eastern Partnership and continues to focus on the same subjects - enabling efficient regional and international co-operation on cybercrime and electronic evidence, and improving public/private cooperation regarding cybercrime and electronic evidence in the Eastern Partnership region. It will be managed by the Cybercrime Programme Office of the Council of Europe (C-PROC) in Romania.

The project will continue to contribute both to improving regional and international co-operation on cybercrime and electronic evidence (Result/Outcome 1) as well as step up effort to improve public/private cooperation regarding cybercrime and electronic evidence in the Eastern Partnership region (Result/Outcome 2).

The project will engage both mutual legal assistance authorities and 24/7 points of contact in international, regional and country-specific activities that increase their skills for handling international cooperation requests, and will also contribute to better regulatory/legal environment for international cooperation to function.

The public-private cooperation element will be further reinforced by region-wide studies on Cybercrime Strategies and Threats, by engaging identified project counterparts and partners into training and exercises with focus on cooperation aspects, and by continuing efforts to improve procedural legislation and to conclude/update the cooperation agreements between the state authorities and internet service providers.

For both dimensions of the project, further support and development of tools and resources of cooperation, maintained by the Council of Europe, will be offered.
