

IRELAND / IRLANDE
21 May/mai 2015

The general rule in Irish Courts, civil and criminal, is that there is a presumption of res judicata. The principle of the finality of litigation is an important one in Irish law.

No special procedure exists that allows for the reopening of domestic proceedings following a judgment of the European Court of Human Rights.