Heritage walk: “Segreti e Armonie” - Secrets and Harmonies

Co-ordination: Patrizia Vachino from the Faro Venezia association <nabimar3@libero.it>

Description: “Veiled” music in 17th Century Venice. The “Figlie di Choro”orphan girls were taken in by the hospitals of Venice and put to study music and singing under the guidance of famous musicians such as Antonio Vivaldi. These young girls, who were never seen as they were always hidden behind screens during performances, enchanted their audience with their accords and virtuosity. This was a female community and, despite their competitiveness, deep bonds were formed between these girls without a name. The S. Maria della Pietà Departmental Institute for Children and the Ospedaletto, which now take in both children and elderly persons in difficulty, have kept the scores and other souvenirs of “Candida dalla Viola”, “Prudenza del Contralto”, “Lucietta Organista” and their companions.
