Acceleration Programme Cloud Incubation Hub

Our biggest innovation actions have been to develop acceleration programmes for young people and women. We organized a European acceleration program for young people that included more than 300 students from 23 countries (<http://euxcel.eu>), other acceleration program for 120 startups from 17 countries

(<http://startup-scaleup.eu>) and other acceleration program for 60 women (<http://girlpowermurcia.com>). Regarding with diversity connectors, the lesson learned are:

- It is really important to work with scalable startups ALWAYS.
- Window of opportunity can be small, it is necessary to be ready.
- Working with 20 startups per incubator will be challenging.
- It is important to attract good mentors and match them with startups.
- It is difficult to know what needs are at start of startups acceleration.
- It is crucial getting close to good VCs and corporates
- Approaching well known VC and corporates is difficult
- Startups aren't necessarily VC ready, even after 6 months
- Sustainability is a crucial issue.

Training and Incubation methodology for NEETs

We have developed a training and incubation methodology specifically dedicated to NEETs. We have already tested it over 40 young people in the City of Milan, and we have found out how difficult is to engage with this target group, mainly for motivation reasons. We are now in the process of supporting 5 of them in a more advanced incubation programme with the aim of creating 5 new companies within 6 months.

Global Platform

We create a global platform and network of entrepreneurs dedicated to solving real-life problems and the global challenges of our time. Visibility is the key-precondition for startup success - only if startups are visible they can be reached by investors, consumers and other ecosystem stakeholders. For us it is important, that additionally to all the provide legal and economic education and support, to give them access to inspiration and support through role models. And as in the early stage always questions arise they

Innovation Test: Case study from Impact Hub Odessa

We tested innovation, the ability to find new solutions that allow you to increase the social impact while reducing the costs, this on a number of programs. The most successful program was the New Countdown - a business incubator for internal migrants. "The New Counting Project operates in two directions. On the one hand, we are socializing and helping to adapt settlers to their new life and ATO participants by opening their own businesses. On the other hand, the city and the country receive new useful ideas and people with strong motivation to implement them. Two months of training and getting acquainted with experts ends with the presentation of projects, the best of them receive grant support. We learned the lessons that the environment most of all develops and motivates people. One of the key tasks of our project was the formation of an active community of interested people.
