I. Main achievements

This chapter presents short summaries of a selection of the main reforms and achievements reported in final resolutions since the Convention system was amended in 1998 by Protocol No. 11, with a clear focus on recent reforms, referring however also to important earlier developments.

In view of the wealth of cases closed, the selection concentrates on those which have led to changes of legislation, government regulations, the adoption of new policies or general guidance from superior courts. As a rule, the overview does not cover information on measures providing individual redress to applicants.

The reforms are in principle presented in the order corresponding to the thematic domains used in the specialised database HUDOC-EXEC of the Department for the Execution of Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights.

Many reforms address issues which appear to be on-going challenges in member states. The effects of reforms adopted at one point in time may thus need to be monitored and possibly revisited as conditions change.¹

Definitions of the terms used in the context of the supervision of the execution of the European Court's judgments are available in the dedicated Glossary.

¹ The presentation is limited to the information provided at the time of the adoption of the final resolution. It is recalled in this context that the Committee of Ministers has issued Recommendation (2004)5 on thea verification of the compatibility of draft laws, existing laws and administrative practice with standards laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights.

Expulsion and related issues

With regard to the examination of risks of death or torture and ill-treatment in the country of origin when considering deportation following a criminal conviction, the Aliens Act 1997 was amended to take into account not only threats from State bodies but also all threats whatever the source due to the absence of State authority at the present time.

Ahmed (25964/94) Final Resolution CM/ResDH(2002)99

In order to secure a full examination of all relevant aspects of family and private life when deciding on issues of removal and residence permits, the respective requirements of Article 8 § 2 of the Convention were explicitly included in the Aliens' Act 2005.

Yildiz (37295/97+)
Final Resolution
CM/ResDH(2009)117

With regard to detention in view of expulsion, aliens have to be informed promptly and adequately of the underlying reasons thereof in a language they understand. Information sheets for detainees under the 2005 Aliens Act were translated into various languages and are available to police authorities and detention centres via the Intranet site of the Ministry of the Interior. When foreigners are questioned by the Aliens authorities shortly after their arrest, an interpreter has to be present to explain the reason for detention.

Rusu (34082/02) Final Resolution CM/ResDH(2012)70

With regard to the lack of a suspensive effect of a second asylum request, the impugned provision of the asylum-law was repealed on the basis of a Constitutional Court's judgment and subsequently amended. Under this new provision, a second asylum request alleging a deterioration of the reception conditions in the country of destination since the issuing of the expulsion order now carries automatic suspensive effect.

Detention and other rights

Compensation for detention

The procedure for deciding questions of compensation for detention after acquittal or the discontinuation of the proceedings was reformed in 2005 to fully respect the requirements of fair and public trial and to abolish the possibility of voicing doubts about innocence after acquittal.

Final Resolution
CM/ResDH(2006)2

Disclosure of personal information in public land register

In its decision of 30 March 2022, the Supreme Court ruled that, despite the lack of a legal basis and the resulting legal gap, which had to be filled by way of analogy, the relevant domestic court (the Land Registry Court) may decide to publish only a partial copy in the archive document collection in order to take into account the persons' fundamental right to the protection of personal data within the meaning of Article 8 of the Convention. Hereafter, the legislative gap identified in the Supreme Court judgment has been filled with the adoption of new legislation and its entry into force in September 2024.

Administrative proceedings

First reform steps started in the 1980ies, when the organisation chart of the Tyrol regional administration was changed in order to ensure the property transactions authority's independence. Later, provisions in the Food Code allowing for a procedural inequality of arms between the Federal Food Control Institute's expert and the defence's expert were declared unconstitutional in 1985 by the Constitutional Court.

Administrative reform processes:

Following an amendment to the Federal Constitution in 1988, as a first step in the fundamental reorganisation process of the Austrian administrative court system, independent administrative tribunals were set up in 1991. Their competence comprises the determination of both the legal and factual issues in regard to administrative offences.

Several other reform steps have addressed the problem of excessively lengthy proceedings, notably the Administrative Reform Act 2001 aimed at alleviating the caseload of the administrative courts and accelerating administrative proceedings.

An extensive overall restructuring of the administrative court system was implemented with effect from January 2014, notably to speed up proceedings. New acceleratory remedies were introduced, and the scope of existing remedies broadened by the jurisprudence of the Supreme Court.

The right to a public and oral hearing in administrative proceedings was improved in several steps. It was also improved in other specific fields, notably in proceedings under the Media Act, in family law and guardianship proceedings and in certain succession proceedings.

Main achievements

According to the Code of Criminal Procedure amendment of 1987, the supervision of conversations between a suspect in detention because of danger of collusion and his defence counsel lies in the discretionary power of the investigating judge only in exceptional cases. However, the investigating judge's decision in this regard must be reasoned and the detained person can lodge an appeal against such a decision.

Persons who, through their statements, would expose themselves to the risk of criminal prosecution, or who run the risk of incriminating themselves, in connection with criminal proceedings brought against them, were exempted from the obligation to testify in 1994.

Further legal amendments of 2000 ensured the summoning of detained persons to granted public hearings in appeal proceedings unless the right was waived.

Duration of proceedings

Under the new Act of the Organisation of the Courts of 1990, when a court delays taking procedural steps such as drawing up a judgment, the parties may request the higher court to prescribe a time-limit for the taking of such procedural steps as an acceleratory remedy.

Further measures taken in 2008 also promoted celerity of proceedings: a remedy was introduced to request termination acceleration of lengthy proceedings or mitigation of sentence could be ordered as compensation.

Acceleratory remedies were further improved and the opportunity to obtain the discontinuation of such proceedings in less important criminal cases was introduced in 2015 through amendments to the Code of Criminal Procedure. In addition, the duration of the investigation phase was limited to three years, and the Public prosecutor was obliged to report to the competent court on the reasons for any delay if the investigation is not completed within this period.

As concerns civil proceedings, the Code of Civil Procedure was amended in 2003 with a view to streamlining and accelerating civil proceedings

Ne bis in idem

Relevant provisions of the Road Traffic Act were abrogated in order to prevent a person to be convicted for a second time by another jurisdiction in respect of facts that had already been subject of a final judicial decision by criminal courts.

To remedy the domestic courts' failure to conduct a comprehensive assessment of the applicant's defamation claim under the Media Act concerning an article published in 2016, in a right-wing periodical and affecting his privacy rights as a Holocaust survivor, activist and former prisoner of the Mauthausen concentration camp, the Attorney General's Office lodged a plea of nullity for observance of the law with the Supreme Court. As a result, in June 2021, the Supreme Court found that the domestic courts had violated their statutory duty to provide reasons for their decisions by denying the applicant's legal standing. Freedom of religion - Discrimination

Discriminatory treatment of the applicants with respect to their freedom of religion on account of a ten-year waiting period for "religious communities" before they can apply for recognition as a "religious society", lacking any objective and reasonable justification in the applicants' cases, as well as on account of the resulting non-applicability of certain exemptions for "religious societies" under domestic law, concerning employment of foreigners for pastoral work and taxation of donations. In 2010, the Constitutional Court quashed the impugned waiting period of the 1998

Religious Communities Act with effect from October 2011. In August 2011, the 1998 Religious Communities Act was amended to make conditions and requirements for the legal recognition as a "religious society" more flexible and non-discriminatory.

Discrimination based on sexual orientation

Discrimination between homo- and heterosexuals as regards the age as from which consensual sexual relations were permitted was abrogated in 2002.

Discrimination of same sex couples in the enjoyment of benefits under the scheme for sickness and accident insurance offered to civil servants was abrogated in legislation in 2007.

Also, second parent adoption in same sex couples was authorised without termination of family relationships with the natural parent by an amendment of the Civil Code in 2013.

Discrimination with regard to succession law

The provision that legitimate children shall always take precedence over outof-wedlock children when determining the principal heir was abrogated and replaced in the Carinthian Hereditary Farms Act 1990.

Discrimination with regard to parental rights

Discrimination against unmarried fathers with respect to child custody was addressed by amendments to the Child Custody Law and the Law on Names in 2013.

International child abduction

Prompt enforcement of return orders and visiting rights under the 1980 Hague Convention was ensured by a law from 2005 which provides that requests for such enforcement are dealt with in a concentrated manner by specialised judges.

The Law on the Return of Children of 2017 provides for a new national procedure under the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction. This law simplifies and speeds up the return of wrongfully removed or retained children and provides for the immediate enforceability of the return order. The law also provides for the re-establishment of contact between the abducted child and the affected parent during as of the beginning of the return proceedings.

II. Main issues pending before the Committee of Ministers

This chapter presents the main issues pending in cases/groups of cases currently under the Committee of Ministers' supervision. The relevant supervision procedure is indicated for each case/group of cases.

Detailed information on the status of execution of these cases as well as on the Committee of Ministers' supervision process is available on the specialised database HUDOC-EXEC of the website of the Department for the Execution of Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights.

Definitions of the terms used in the context of the supervision of the execution of the European Court's judgments are available in the dedicated Glossary.

Main issues pending

Private and family life

Unjustified prohibition on prefix "von" in the applicants' surnames, after a long period of accepted use on the basis of an inconsistant application of the 1919 Abolition of Nobility Act.

Status of execution

The Council of Europe is the continent's leading human rights organisation. It comprises 46 member states, including all members of the European Union. The Committee of Ministers is the Council of Europe's decision-making body, composed by the foreign ministers of all 46 member states. It is a forum where national approaches to European problems and challenges are discussed, in order to find collective responses. The Committee of Ministers participates in the implementation of the European Convention on Human Rights through the supervision of the execution of judgments of the European Court of Human Rights.
