I. Main achievements

This chapter presents short summaries of a selection of the main reforms and achievements reported in final resolutions since the Convention system was amended in 1998 by Protocol No. 11, with a clear focus on recent reforms, referring however also to important earlier developments.

In view of the wealth of cases closed, the selection concentrates on those which have led to changes of legislation, government regulations, the adoption of new policies or general guidance from superior courts. As a rule, the overview does not cover information on measures providing individual redress to applicants.

The reforms are in principle presented in the order corresponding to the thematic domains used in the specialised database HUDOC-EXEC of the Department for the Execution of Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights.

Many reforms address issues which appear to be on-going challenges in member states. The effects of reforms adopted at one point in time may thus need to be monitored and possibly revisited as conditions change.<sup>1</sup>

Definitions of the terms used in the context of the supervision of the execution of the European Court's judgments are available in the dedicated Glossary.

<sup>1</sup> The presentation is limited to the information provided at the time of the adoption of the final resolution. It is recalled in this context that the Committee of Ministers has issued Recommendation \(2004\)5 on the verification of the compatibility of draft laws, existing laws and administrative practice with standards laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights.

► Actions of security forces and effectiveness of investigations

The efficiency of investigations conducted into alleged abuses was improved after the adoption of a new Criminal Procedure Code in 2006, ensuring the victims' and their relatives' active participation in the investigations. In June 2011, an amendment to the Criminal Code introduced racist or xenophobic intentions as aggravated circumstances for murder and bodily harm, thus allowing closer investigations into offences' underlying motivations (notably related to Roma<sup>2</sup>). New rules concerning the use of fire-arms by ordinary and military police were adopted in 2012 and 2016. The "absolute necessity" test for the use of force was introduced and the framework on safeguards against ill-treatment was reinforced. An amendment to the Ministry of Interior Act, in force since 1 January 2019, provides that police officers who take part in special police operations must wear individual identification numbers. When special forces are involved, the requirement to visibly display an anonymous form of identification aims at preventing impunity for serious human rights violations. In 2023, an important legislative reform introduced, inter alia, judicial review of refusals to open investigation for certain categories of offences and criminalisation of torture. Several outstanding issues continue to be examined in the Dimitrov and Others case (77938/11).

► Protection of the right to life

In 2023, the parliament adopted an amendment to paragraph 11 of Article 116(1) of the Criminal Code classifying as aggravated murders motivated by hostility towards the victim's actual or presumed sexual orientation. The provisions concerning bodily harm and certain other criminal offences have also been amended to provide for an aggravated classification when the offence is committed for reasons related to sexual orientation.

► Protection against ill-treatment

In 2006, strict deadlines were adopted for pre-trial investigations and their monitoring by a supervisory prosecutor. According to legislative amendments adopted in 2016, the preliminary inquiries must not exceed two months; this time-limit can only be prolonged by one month. In 2017, the introduction of an acceleratory remedy for the accused, the victims and for civil parties made the speeding up of proceedings possible. At the same time, the obligation to automatically terminate criminal proceedings after the expiry of a certain period of time (depending on the gravity of the offence) was abolished. Several outstanding issues continue to be examined in the S.Z. group (29263/12).

► Conditions of detention / remedies

Measures were taken to address poor conditions of detention, overcrowding, lack of adequate health care and restrictive penitentiary regimes. A specific prohibition of inhuman and degrading treatment of convicted prisoners was introduced in the Penal Sanctions and Detention in Custody Act of 2009 and extended explicitly to prisoners on remand in 2017. The scope of the prohibition of inhuman and degrading treatment was also extended in 2017 to cover issues related to access to prisoners' physical activities, prolonged isolation.

<sup>2</sup> The term "Roma and Travellers" is used at the Council of Europe to encompass the wide diversity of the groups covered by the work of the Council of Europe in this field: on the one hand a) Roma, Sinti/Manush, Cale, Kaale, Romanichals, Boyash/Rudari; b) Balkan Egyptians (Egyptians and Ashkali); c) Eastern groups (Dom, Lom and Abdal); and, on the other hand, groups such as Travellers, Yenish, and the populations designated under the administrative term "Gens du voyage", as well as persons who identify themselves as Gypsies.

In 2017, the authorities introduced effective preventive and compensatory remedies. They also adopted a variety of criminal and penitentiary policy measures (e.g. more flexible accommodation of inmates to open-type prisons; right for inmates to request directly conditional release before the competent court). As of June 2024, overcrowding was almost completely eradicated and the material conditions in penitentiary facilities were significantly improved, which facilitates the functioning of the preventive remedy. The adoption of awareness-raising measures led to a relative increase of the amounts awarded under the compensatory remedy. Certain outstanding questions regarding conditions of detention and the functioning of remedies, including the amounts of compensation awarded in domestic proceedings related to poor conditions of detention continue to be examined in the Kehayov case. Outstanding questions related to restrictive penitentiary regimes and corresponding remedies are examined in the Harakchiev and Toloumov case, while questions related to health care in prison are examined in the Gavazov case.

➔ Right to liberty and security

Compulsory detention on remand, especially in cases of recidivism, was revoked in 1997. The provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure relating to detention on remand were amended in 1999: 72 hours were determined as the maximum period of detention without judicial review, where detention on remand was requested by a prosecutor (24 hours if requested by an investigator). The review is to be decided by a single-judge court after a public hearing attended by the person accused, his counsel and the prosecutor. The guarantees were strengthened in important respects through several legislative reforms in the period 2000-2006, notably to prevent continuation of detention despite release orders and excessively lengthy detention, as well as to grant a possibility to obtain compensation for detention in violation of Article 5 of the Convention. Legislative amendments of 2023 introduced judicial review of the lawfulness of detention after conviction which allows determining whether (i) periods of pre-trial detention had been properly deducted from a prison sentence by the Prosecutor's Office; (ii) the execution of the prison sentences was time-barred.

Functioning of justice

➤ Fairness of proceedings

Several legislative reforms between 2000 and 2011 have secured and improved the possibility to obtain the reopening of criminal cases heard in absentia.

➤ Remedies against excessive length of proceedings

The possibility to seek acceleration of pending proceedings was introduced in the Code of Administrative Procedure of 2006 and in the Civil Procedure Code of 2007. The possibility to obtain compensation for excessive length of civil and criminal proceedings was introduced in 2012. As regards the duration of preliminary investigations, the Judiciary Act was amended in 2016 so as to limit the duration of the preliminary inquiries to two months; this time-limit can be prolonged only by one month.

➤ Publicity in civil proceedings involving secret surveillance material

The judicial practice in civil cases has evolved, currently ensuring the publicity of court hearings and rendered judgments where material obtained through secret surveillance is used. The legal ground which served for the classification of the court's judgment was repealed in 2013. In an interpretative decision of 2014, the Supreme Court of Cassation held in respect of an analogous provision in criminal cases that the mere fact that a case involved secret surveillance material was not sufficient to examine it in private; the public should be excluded only from steps genuinely involving State secrets; judgments in such cases must as a rule be published in their entirety.

Protection of private and family life

➤ Review of expulsion orders

Judicial review of expulsion orders based on national security grounds has developed in practice and was expressly provided for in the 2007 Aliens Act. Further changes introduced in 2009 and 2011 require that before expelling a foreign national residing permanently in Bulgaria, the authorities should take into account their personal and family situation, level of integration and the strength of connections with the country of origin. Detention of foreign nationals pending expulsion was better circumscribed in 2009 through the introduction of an exhaustive and limited list of grounds for such detention, the definition of a maximum length of detention and its periodic review.

➤ Prisoners' correspondence

The Law on the Execution of Punishments was amended in 1998 in order to protect prisoners' correspondence with, among others, the UN and Council of Europe bodies. In 2009 a new Execution of Punishments and Pre-Trial Detention Act entered into force regulating the right to correspondence and telephone use of prisoners.

➤ Filiation / paternity actions

In 2020, amendments to the Family Code were adopted to provide that any person who claims to be the parent of a recognized child may contest the parental link established by recognition within one year after becoming aware of it. In its decision, the competent court shall take into account the interests of the child.

Furthermore, the amendments to the Family Code also extended the possibility to challenge the legal presumption of paternity beyond the current statutory one-year time-limit after learning of the child's birth to a one-year period after learning of "new circumstances" (e.g. DNA-results) but before the child concerned reached the age of majority and taking into consideration the child's best interests.

➤ Secret surveillance

Significant improvements of the regulatory framework of secret surveillance was carried out through, inter alia, introduction of domestic judicial remedy, oversight mechanism, reinforced rules on judicial authorisation, etc. The outstanding questions concerning several shortcomings of the system and effectiveness of the domestic remedies continue to be examined in the Ekimdzhiev and Others case (70078/12).

➤ Freedom of religion

Excessive executive interference with freedom of religion, notably direct interference with the choice of church leadership, and discrimination in the area of church registrations are no longer possible since the competence for these registrations was transferred in 2002 from the executive to the courts. The sweeping powers of the public prosecution to restore in quick and urgent cases the initial factual situation in cases, used to order eviction of religious ministers and staff who identified themselves with the alternative Synod of the Bulgarian Orthodox Church, were based on a provision which does not exist anymore in the Bulgarian legal order. There are now rules on contesting unlawful actions and inactions of State bodies and abundant case-law effectively compensating victims of unlawful state bodies interventions. There is a long record of respecting authoritative decisions of the community on leadership and confirming the absence of inappropriate interference in the organisational autonomy of the Church by State bodies demonstrating a change in administrative practice. Issues concerning the registration of alternative Orthodox churches are currently examined in the context of the Bulgarian Orthodox Old Calendar Church and Others v. Bulgaria group.

An amnesty was enacted for persons convicted of refusing to perform military service in the period between the entry into force of the Constitution in 1991 and that of the Law on the replacement of military obligations by alternative service in 1998.

➤ Freedom of expression

➤ Defamation

Prison sentences for insult were abolished in 2000.

In July 2023 the Criminal Code was amended abolishing the automatic aggravated qualification, if the victim of defamation or insult is a civil servant, and allowed waiving of criminal liability and imposition of administrative punishment in cases concerning insult or defamation of state officials who exercise authority in their official capacity.

➤ Broadcasting

Under the 2001 Radio and Television Act the Council for Electronic Media (CEM) is an independent specialized body that regulates media services. The above Act provides for a tender procedure for issuing licenses for analogue radio and television broadcasting. In 2018, the Supreme Administrative Court underlined that the scope of its judicial review comprises the validity and the justification of CEM's decisions, including compliance with the procedural rules and national law. Thus, the applicable legal framework and the resulting case-law of the Supreme Administrative Court concerning the licensing of radio and television broadcasting, today, provide sufficient safeguards and an effective remedy in that respect.

➤ Access to public information

The right of access to public information was strengthened. Since 2015, this right can only be refused if an affected third party has explicitly prohibited access and if there is no prevailing public interest justifying restriction.

The competence was limited to ensure respect of the formal requirements set by law. Possible refusals may be appealed to the regional court within seven days.

➤ Protection of property rights

In the context of a legislative reform initiated in 2018, the 1969 Administrative Offences and Punishments Act was amended. By these amendments (which entered into force in December 2021) an avenue of complaint enabling owners of forfeited goods to participate in the relevant administrative-penal proceedings and challenge interferences with their property rights is introduced.

In 2021, the Constitutional Court declared unconstitutional a provision in the Criminal Code which provides for confiscation in favour of the State of the vehicle or means of transport used for contraband goods even when it was not the property of the perpetrator. Currently, the domestic courts do not apply this provision on the basis of the Constitutional Court's decision.

II. Main issues pending before the Committee of Ministers

This chapter presents the main issues pending in cases/groups of cases currently under the Committee of Ministers' supervision. The relevant supervision procedure is indicated for each case/group of cases.

Detailed information on the status of execution of these cases as well as on the Committee of Ministers' supervision process is available on the specialised database HUDOC-EXEC of the website of the Department for the Execution of Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights.

Definitions of the terms used in the context of the supervision of the execution of the European Court's judgments are available in the dedicated Glossary.

► Protection of the right to life

Deaths of children placed in public care; lack of prompt and effective investigation into these deaths.

Significant progress: The material living conditions of children with disabilities have been improved since the closure of the former care homes and the opening of new family-type residential centres. The current capacity of such centres is sufficient, including for children requiring complex medical treatment. Legislative amendments were introduced in May 2023 providing for judicial review of refusals to open a criminal investigation into certain offences, and for the independent representation of children whose parents have lost interest in their upbringing, once a criminal investigation has been officially initiated. In-depth analysis was prepared by the authorities in March 2024 on possible reforms to ensure the independent representation for children placed outside their family, if parents are not interested in them, to enable such children to have complaints relating to their health and treatment examined by a court or other independent body. This progress allowed for the case to be moved from enhanced to standard supervision.

► Actions of security forces – effective investigations

Deaths, torture, ill-treatment, excessive use of force, or lack of medical assistance in due time, occurring on arrest, in police detention or in penitentiary facilities and lack of effective investigations.

Significant progress: Several significant reforms adopted concerning, inter alia, the "absolute necessity" test for the use of force, rules on identification of police officers participating in special operations and the reinforcement of the framework on safeguards against ill-treatment, creation of National Preventive Mechanism, judicial review of refusals to open investigation for certain categories of offences and criminalisation of torture.

Lawfulness of detention and related issues

Unsatisfactory procedures for placement in social care homes of persons with mental disorders and lack of judicial review of lawfulness of detention; inhuman conditions of placement and lack of an effective remedy in this respect; impossibility for partially incapacitated persons to request before courts the restoration of their legal capacity.

Significant progress: Following legislative reforms of 2017 persons under partial guardianship now have direct access to court to request restoration of their legal capacity.

Reception / Expulsion / Extradition

Expulsion and deportation of foreign nationals on national security grounds:

- lack of adequate safeguards in deportation proceedings and insufficient review of relevant facts;
- lack of judicial control of the expulsion measure's proportionality, notably as regards respect for family life; non-compliance with the principle of adversarial proceedings;
- lack of publicity of judicial decisions;
- lack of suspensive effect of appeals in case of risk of ill-treatment in the destination country.

Significant progress: Adoption of important legislative reform on expulsion of aliens (indication of the destination country in a legally binding act, which is amenable to judicial review; temporary automatic suspensive effect of appeals against expulsion orders based on national-security grounds, containing substantiated allegations of important risk of death or ill-treatment in the destination country, which may be prolonged by decision of the domestic courts; provisions on swift judicial review of detention pending expulsion).

Unfair insolvency proceedings on account of the lack of proper representation of the applicant's bank and of the failure by the domestic court to examine the merits of the findings of the Bulgarian National Bank regarding the applicant bank's insolvency.

Significant progress: The legal framework was amended in the context of Bulgaria's accession to the Single Supervisory Mechanism (SSM) and the adoption by the European Central Bank (ECB) of Decision (EU) 2020/1015 establishing close cooperation between ECB and the Bulgarian National Bank. As a result, in the future the examination of any appeal against a withdrawal of a banking licence will take place before the Court of Justice of the European Union whose case law ensures Convention-compliant examination, in particular concerning the proper representation of a bank for the sake of challenging the revocation of a bank's licence.

Different violations related to restitution of or compensation for property (agricultural or forestry land) nationalized during the Communist regime.
