

Committee on Education for Democracy - Webinar series - #2

“Digital education for active citizenship”

Monday, 4 December 2023, 11.30 – 13.00 CET

Concept

Through a short series of webinar, the CINGO Committee on Education for Democracy seeks to leverage on civil society and their wealth of knowledge to share working practices that are effective in learning, teaching and shaping democracy. The experience of democratic processes is essential in all learning environments, in that democracy is not something that is aseptically taught but rather something that needs to be experienced. In a learner-centred approach, involving learners in the design of their education remains a central endeavor. This is all the more appropriate for non-formal and informal learning environments.

This second webinar addressed the transformations brought by the digital revolution into the world of education and in particular adult education. Speakers illustrated practical examples of how such transformations can serve as a benchmark to foster active citizenship.
