

14/07/2023

RAP/Cha/POL/22(2023)

EUROPEAN SOCIAL CHARTER

Comments submitted by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees concerning the 22nd National Report on the implementation of the European Social Charter

submitted by

THE GOVERNMENT OF POLAND

Articles 7, 8, 16, 17, and 19 for the period 01/01/2018 – 31/12/2021

Comments registered by the Secretariat on 14 July 2023

CYCLE 2023

Submission by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to the European Committee of Social Rights of the Council of Europe

On the 19th National Report on the implementation of the European Social Charter submitted by the Government of POLAND covering the period from 1 January 2018 to 31 December 2021

Issue 1: Accede to the 1954 Convention Relating to the Status of Stateless Persons (1954 Convention) and the 1961 Convention on the Prevention of Statelessness (1961 Convention), in order to better fulfil its protection obligations under the European Social Charter

UNHCR would like to note that Poland is neither party to the 1954 Convention nor to the 1961 Convention. Poland does not have a dedicated statelessness determination procedure in place and there is no definition of a stateless person in Polish law. According to Polish legislation a stateless person is considered a foreigner under Article 3(2) of the Act on Foreigners. Relevant procedures which include components of identification of statelessness and nationality assessment include the asylum and return procedures.

The 1961 Convention establishes an international framework to ensure the right of every person to a nationality by establishing safeguards to prevent statelessness at birth and later in life. Accession to the 1961 Convention and effective implementation of the convention remains the most effective way to prevent and resolve statelessness.

Stateless persons who meet the refugee definition contained in the 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees (1951 Convention) are afforded the necessary international protection associated with that status. However, the international refugee protection regime does not specifically address the rights of non-refugee stateless persons who are in need of international protection. Without the nationality of any country, stateless persons are often subject to a range of human rights violations and can often fall into a vicious cycle involving failed expulsion and prolonged or repeated detention and release into situations of destitution. Stateless persons are also at a heightened risk of abuse and exploitation. The 1954 Convention is an important instrument to ensure that stateless persons are able to enjoy their human rights. In addition to establishing the international legal definition of a "stateless person", the 1954 Convention also provides a core set of principles for their treatment.

In light of the above, the Committee may wish to encourage the Polish Government to ratify the 1954 Convention and the 1961 Convention.

Issue 2: Consider reform of the national citizenship law to fully protect children born on Polish territory against statelessness, in line with Art. 17 of the European Social Charter

Poland does not have a full safeguard to prevent children from being born stateless on the territory. The Polish citizenship law does not provide for the acquisition of nationality by children born to parents who are known but cannot transfer their citizenship.

_

The 2009 Act on Polish Citizenship¹ in Article 14(2) and Article 15 grants automatic acquisition of citizenship to children born on the territory of the Republic of Poland, whose parents are unknown, do not have any citizenship or their citizenship is unspecified or if s/he is a found child. However, the Act does not provide for safeguards against statelessness after birth in the event of the birth of a child whose parents have a specific nationality but cannot transfer it to the child. This provision also cannot be used by children abandoned immediately after birth in the hospital, because the hospital usually has information about the mother's data (parents are not unknown). Both cases may lead to statelessness and such instances were observed in Poland.² Rather than focusing on the status of the parents, the 1961 Convention requires an inquiry into the statelessness of the child and whether he or she is able to acquire the nationality of the parents or the State of birth.³

The Committee may wish to encourage the Polish government to review the Act on Polish Citizenship (2009) and consider including provisions that ensure that children born on Polish territory who would otherwise be stateless are able to acquire a nationalityThis amendment would facilitate limitation of existing risk of statelessness at birth in the country.

Issue 3: Consider alternatives to detention for asylum-seeking families, survivors of torture and violence, in order to better fulfil its protection obligations under European Social Charter

The 2013 *Act on Foreigners*⁴ includes provisions for the detention of asylum-seekers. While it does not prioritize detention as a last resort, it specifies that detention should be applied only when no alternatives are available. According to Article 398a of the Act on Foreigners, the Border Guard is authorized to detain individuals based on legitimate grounds, such as establishing identity, preventing absconding, pre-removal detention, transfers under the Dublin Regulation, and reasons related to state security or public order. Upon apprehension, the Border Guard has the option to directly apply alternatives to detention or seek a court decision regarding detention or the use of alternatives.

The recent amendment to the Act on Foreigners introduced in April 2023 has significantly extended the permissible period of stay in guarded centers and detention centers for foreigners. As a general rule, the detention of foreigners can now last up to 18 months, whereas previously it was limited to a maximum of 12 months.

Furthermore, UNHCR would like to note that pregnant and nursing mothers are placed in detention unless there is a specific threat to their health or life. Release is not authorize d even in cases of miscarriage and the physical and psychological consequences that may arise. However, according to Article 88a of the Act on Protection, persons seeking international protection should not be placed in detention centers if this could endanger their life or health, if

¹ Law of 2 April 2009 on Polish citizenship, JoL 2012, item 161, Ustawa z dnia 2 kwietnia 2009 r. o obywatelstwie polskim (sejm.gov.pl)

² For ex. case of a girl abandoned in the hospital by Romanian mother: Przez 22 lata Maria była bezpaństwowcem. Udało się odnaleźć rodzinę - UWAGA! (tvn.pl)

³ UN High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), Guidelines on Statelessness No. 4: Ensuring Every Child's Right to Acquire a Nationality through Articles 1-4 of the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, para. 18, 21 December 2012, HCR/GS/12/04, available at: https://www.refworld.org/docid/50d460c72.html.

⁴Law of 12 December 2013 on Foreigners, JoL 2013, item 1650, Ustawa z dnia 12 grudnia 2013 r. o cudzoziemcach (sejm.gov.pl) their psychophysical condition indicates a likelihood of violence, if they are unaccompanied children, or if they have disabilities.

Therefore, the Commission may consider recommending that the Government of Poland implements alternatives to detention and utilizes detention only as a measure of last resort, when necessary and proportionate, and for the shortest possible duration. It is important to ensure that conditions in detention and reception facilities are humane and dignified, and that survivors of torture and other vulnerable individuals are not placed in detention.

Issue 4: Implement alternatives to detention for asylum-seeking children in order to ensure the right of children and young persons to protection, in line with Art. 7 of the European Social Charter

Poland's Act on Foreigners and *Act on Protection*⁵ allow for the detention of accompanied asylum-seeking children with family if an adult family member is detained, in a separate family detention facility. The duration of a child's detention often equals that of family members. Unaccompanied minors over age 15 can also be placed in detention, except for those seeking international protection.

According to Polish law, when considering the placement of an unaccompanied minor in a guarded center, the court shall take various factors into account, including the child's physical and mental development, personality traits, circumstances of detention, and personal conditions favoring placement in a detention facility. Article 401(4) of the Act on Foreigners specifies that when deciding on placing a foreigner with a child under their care in a detention center, the court should also prioritize the welfare of the child.

UNHCR wishes to highlight that in cases concerning the detention of families with children, the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) has consistently emphasized that the best interests of the child should be the primary consideration. The ECtHR, in cases concerning use of detention for families with children in Poland, reiterates that the best interests of the child principle ought to be the primary consideration. In Bistieva and Others v. Poland, the Court held "the child's best interests cannot be confined to keeping the family together and that the authorities have to take all the necessary steps to limit, as far as possible, the detention of families accompanied by children and effectively preserve the right to family life" 6.

In light of the above, the Commission may wish to recommend to the Government of Poland to always implement alternatives to the detention of children, whether accompanied or unaccompanied and separated, and take measures in accordance with the best interests of the child.

-

⁵ Law of 12 June 2003 on Granting Protection to Foreigners, JoL, 2003, item 1176 Ustawa z dnia 13 czerwca 2003 r. o udzielaniu cudzoziemcom ochrony na terytorium Rzeczypospolitej Polskiej (sejm.gov.pl)

⁶ Bistieva and Others v. Poland, Application no. 75157/14, para. 85, ECHR, 2018