I. Main achievements

This chapter presents short summaries of a selection of the main reforms and achievements reported in final resolutions since the Convention system was amended in 1998 by Protocol No. 11, with a clear focus on recent reforms, referring however also to important earlier developments.

In view of the wealth of cases closed, the selection concentrates on those which have led to changes of legislation, government regulations, the adoption of new policies or general guidance from superior courts. As a rule, the overview does not cover information on measures providing individual redress to applicants.

The reforms are in principle presented in the order corresponding to the thematic domains used in the specialised database HUDOC-EXEC of the Department for the Execution of Judgments of the European Court of Human Rights.

Many reforms address issues which appear to be on-going challenges in member states. The effects of reforms adopted at one point in time may thus need to be monitored and possibly revisited as conditions change.¹

Definitions of the terms used in the context of the supervision of the execution of the European Court's judgments are available in the dedicated Glossary.

¹ The presentation is limited to the information provided at the time of the adoption of the final resolution. It is recalled in this context that the Committee of Ministers has issued Recommendation \(2004\)5 on the verification of the compatibility of draft laws, existing laws and administrative practice with standards laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights.

➡ Right to life

- Protection against domestic violence

In 2019, a Government Protocol for Responding to Domestic Violence determined general principles for action of the police, judiciary, health practitioners, probation officers, social welfare centres and other competent authorities. Seven victim assistance offices were put in place. In 2011 and 2015, amendments to the Criminal Code introduced a definition of the offences of “domestic violence in a family” and “family-related crimes of particular gravity” as well as protective measures against perpetrators such as compulsory psychological and social treatment, restraining orders, removal from a household and protective supervision following to the release from prison. In 2020, a minimum prison sentence of one year was introduced for the crime of domestic violence.

➡ Action of security forces and effective investigations

- Investigations into crimes committed during the Croatian Homeland War

New regulations ensure that war crimes are investigated by independent police units. The different proceedings stayed during the “Homeland War” were resumed by special legislation in 2003.

Kutić(48778/99+)
Final Resolution
CM/ResDH(2006)3

- Lack of effective investigations into war crimes

In 2011, the Strategy for Investigation and Prosecution of War Crimes was adopted improving cooperation between prosecutors and the police in prosecution of war crimes. Regional cooperation was enhanced, through bilateral agreements on war crime investigations between neighbouring countries and meetings of regional prosecutors and representatives of ministries of justice. In 2019/21 the State Attorney General requested that all war crime cases, including the ones in the stages of inquiries be transferred to the specialised judicial and investigatory structures established for war crimes prosecution. Special structures responsible for investigating war crimes (four state attorney’s offices, four county courts, and specialised police force) were established. In 2013, victims’ involvement in criminal investigations and public scrutiny was enhanced. In 2014 the possibility to request the review of the effectiveness of criminal investigations (including into war crimes) was introduced before the Constitutional Court as an effective remedy. In 2019, the Act on the Missing Persons in the Homeland War was adopted prescribing procedures, competence, record keeping and other aspects of search, exhumation and identification of missing persons, and providing a higher degree of protection for family members of missing persons.

- Investigations into alleged ill-treatment by the police

In 2011, the Criminal Procedure Code introduced the principle of prosecutorial investigation. In 2013, amendments introduced strict time-limits, a new system of legal remedies and a higher level of victim participation. In 2014, the Constitutional Court changed the Constitutional Court Rules to be able to order the prosecuting authorities to carry out specific procedural steps aimed at identifying perpetrators and to award a victim compensation for damages.

Amendments of 2014 to the Act on Police Work and Powers provided that, in case of suspicion of a criminal offence committed by a police officer, investigative steps are to be conducted by a different organisational unit. Amendments of 2015 strengthened disciplinary responsibility for police negligence. According to the 2019 amendment to the Police Act, the Complaints Board consists of nine members appointed by Parliament, representing civil society, public institutions and NGOs. In 2019, amendments to the Ministry of Interior's Internal Regulation ensured a higher degree of independence and impartiality of police officers working in internal control units.

Furthermore, an electronic custody records system for interrogations was introduced in 2011. In 2017, the Criminal Procedure Code was amended to prevent excessive use of force and to ensure independent oversight of investigations into allegations of police misconduct. These amendments also prohibit police officers to interrogate suspects through informal questioning. Suspects may exercise the right to a lawyer from the moment of acquiring the capacity of suspect. In addition, a suspect's interview must be recorded with an audio-visual device. Finally, according to the European Court's decision in Kušić and Others (71667/17), the possibility of a constitutional complaint provides for effective investigations into allegations under Articles 2 and 3.

- Investigations into allegations of ill-treatment by prison guards

In 2018 the Prison Administration took steps to intensify inspection in prisons, including by introducing video surveillance in prisons. Following the CPT visit in 2017, the Ministry of Justice established a special department for monitoring and supervising the work of the prison staff. It also conducts investigations into actions of prison officers, including upon the cellmates' complaints. In 2013 the Act on the Execution of the Prison Sentence has been amended, enabling the judicial protection of prisoners' complaints concerning alleged ill-treatment (previously, their complaints were dealt with only by prison administration). In February 2021, a new Act on the Execution of the Prison Sentence has been adopted, as well as the relevant by-laws, further standardising the use of means of coercion by prison staff.

➤ Prison conditions

Several prisons were renovated between 2012 to 2014, including heating systems and sanitary facilities. As concerns medical treatment, additional medical staff was recruited. Finally, the 2013 Law on Compulsory Medical Insurance provided for compulsory medical insurance for all prisoners. Prisons were affiliated to the public IT health system in 2019.

To address the issue of overcrowding, the Probation Act 2010 introduced a probation service to advise domestic courts on appropriate sanctions. The 2011 Criminal Procedure Code, as amended in 2012 and 2013, introduced alternative sanctions such as community work.

➤ Protection against ill-treatment in case of action by thirds parties

- Physical restraints in psychiatric hospital

The 2014 Protection of Individuals with Mental Disorders Act introduced a tight timeframe for psychiatric hospitals to examine allegations raised by persons with mental disorders subject to involuntary placement. In 2015, the Ministry of Health's regulation governing involuntary placement to psychiatric institutions codified the rules of conduct of medical staff when applying compulsory measures of restraint and introduced an obligation for psychiatric hospitals to issue internal guidelines governing the respective procedures.

➔ Functioning of justice

➤ Fairness of proceedings / Criminal proceedings

The Code of Criminal Procedure, which entered into force in 2011, transferred the competence to conduct pre-trial criminal investigations from the Police to the State Attorneys. In 2014, the Ministry of Justice's Rules provided that State Attorneys have an obligation to keep detailed records of interrogations and to document procedures and decisions. Moreover, with regard to alleged breaches of defence rights in criminal proceedings, domestic courts, and in particular the Supreme Court and the Constitutional Court, aligned their case-law to the present judgment.

In July 2017, the Criminal Procedure Code was amended to clarify the reopening requirements for criminal proceedings conducted in absentia, ensuring that an accused may exercise the right to a retrial without first being obliged to surrender to the judicial authorities.

➤ Transparency of evidence collection

Mandatory procedures for establishing reports on samples taken and packed for forensic analysis were introduced. Domestic courts changed their case-law and henceforth take into account objections concerning evidence which allegedly has been tampered with by the police.

➤ Expert evidence in criminal proceedings

Since 2015, the new Act on Protection of Individuals with Mental Disorders provides that the necessity of a defendant's psychiatric detention shall be assessed on the basis of an expert assessment, allowing a judge to order a less intrusive measure. Earlier, in 2013, an amendment to the Criminal Procedure Code had introduced the possibility of a defendant's treatment outside psychiatric hospitals, abolishing mandatory internment.

The amended Criminal Procedure Code of 2013 also forbids the courts to base a conviction solely or decisively on a statement given by witnesses during criminal investigations, unless the defendants and/or their lawyers were given an opportunity to be present and examine the witnesses.

➤ Principle of equality of arms and lack of adversarial proceedings

The amendments of the Criminal Procedure Code in 2013, 2017, and 2022, introduced possibilities for the defendants to attend appeal panel sessions – if they so requested and regardless of such request if it is deemed expedient. In accordance with 2013 amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code, the state attorneys are precluded from submitting their opinions to appellate courts after reviewing case files.

➤ Access to a court

In 2013, the Constitutional Court declared the dismissal of claims due to the improper submission of rectification requests as overly formalistic; subsequently, the Constitutional Court and the Supreme Court changed their case-law, in 2014 and 2017, respectively.

➤ Organisation of the judiciary

The administrative system of justice improved its efficiency by an overall reorganisation in 2012 introducing a two-tier system and a new High Court to deal with administrative disputes.

➤ Disciplinary proceedings concerning judges

The procedures before the National Judicial Council when handling disciplinary cases against judges were reformed in 2011 to avoid any risk of lack of impartiality, secure the access of the public to hearings and the respect of the principle of equality of arms.

➤ Remedies against excessive length of proceedings

A reform of land registry proceedings took place in 2006 which decreased the number of pending land registry cases, shortened overall duration of such proceedings and transferred all registry data on mortgage and ownership rights into electronic format.

With regard to acceleratory and compensatory remedies in civil proceedings, between 2002 and 2005, it was in the Constitutional Court's competence to set time-limits for the lower courts and to award compensation. In the 2005 Courts Act, this competence was restricted to cases pending before the Supreme Court as for other pending cases ordinary higher courts could decide. Subsequently, the amendments to the Civil Procedure Code of 2013 streamlined the procedure, fixed tight deadlines and addressed the issue of insufficient compensation. The Constitutional Court remains competent as a last resort.

In 2014 the Enforcement Act was amended and a dedicated authority, the Financial Agency, was set up to enforce writs of execution in a diligent manner. In 2015, IT solutions enabling the Agency to sell movable and immovable properties at electronic public auctions were introduced. Thus, excessive delays in enforcement proceedings with regard to all types of property (bank accounts, movable and immovable property) could be prevented. As regards immovable property, an amendment to the Enforcement Act of 2017 introduced safeguards for debtors preventing double payments, thereby eliminating a cause for delays in proceedings.

➤ Legal costs

In 2019 the impugned provision related to the automatic application of the "loser pays" principle provision of the Civil Procedure Code was amended ensuring that, when evaluating parties' success and deciding upon the reimbursement of costs, the domestic courts take a qualitative approach and take into account only the final value of the claim whilst bearing in mind the success in proving the substance of the claim.

➤ Legal costs of a constitutional complaint

The Constitutional Court aligned its case-law with the European Court. In particular, it now provides meaningful reasoning for its cost decisions in consideration of the specific circumstances of each case, its significance for the complainants and their financial situation based on the arguments and evidence provided by the claimants.

➡ No punishment without law

The translation of Article 5 of Annex C to the Istanbul Convention on Temporary Admission has been revised. Throughout the Croatian text of the Istanbul Convention, including the Article 5 of Annex C, the term "persons resident" was replaced with the term "persons having habitual residence". This will ensure consistent interpretation of that provision by the domestic authorities.

➡ Ne bis in idem

➤ Unlawful surveillance

The Constitutional Court and the Supreme Court aligned their practice with the Convention, integrating the relevant Article 8 principles concerning secret surveillance in their case-law, with a view to preventing arbitrariness in the procedures ordering and examining the proportionality of secret surveillance measures. Since 2011 the Criminal Procedure Code enables defendant's access to recordings and the possibility to request their reproducing during the hearing.

➤ Protection against child abuse

In 2014, the Government’s “National Strategy on Child Protection” was adopted, and its “Protocol on Conduct in Cases of Alleged Abuse and Neglect of Children” set out mandatory courses of action for prosecutors. In 2015, the Family Act tightened procedural deadlines in custody proceedings. The Constitutional Court’s recent case-law ensured that children are heard in custody proceedings

- Child abduction proceedings

In 2018, the Act on the Implementation of the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction was adopted stipulating competences, deadlines and procedures for handling cases in a clear and consistent manner. It vested the Zagreb Municipal Civil Court and Zagreb County Court with the exclusive competence to conduct return of child proceedings. After 2016 the Constitutional Court changed its practice and developed consistent case law, highlighting the importance of the concept of the child’s best interests as an underlying principle of The Hague Convention. In 2015, an inter-departmental Commission was established with the aim, inter alia, to improve cooperation between the authorities involved in the proceedings for the return of a child, thus accelerating such proceedings.

➤ Freedom of expression

- In the context of civil proceedings

The Constitutional Court had aligned its practice with the European Court’s standards, and it is demonstrated that now domestic courts make a proper distinction between “statements of facts” and “value judgments”. Various awareness-raising measures for the judiciary had been carried out.

- In the context of criminal proceedings

The Constitutional Court had aligned its practice in similar cases regarding criminal convictions for defamation by invoking the relevant Court’s standards stemming from Article 10 of the Convention. Various awareness-raising measures for the judiciary had been carried out.

- Rent control scheme

In April 2024, the Law on the implementation of the European Court’s judgments of the Statileo group (12027/10+) and the Constitutional Court’s decision (U-I-3242/2018) entered into force. It set out a number of the programme measures to bring the protected rent scheme to an end from 1 January 2025 until the protected lease scheme ends, landlords receive a “transitional protected rent” equal to average market rent. The 2024 Law also provides one-off financial assistance of EUR 1,000 to vulnerable groups for their relocation, free accommodation in State-run elderly homes for protected tenants 65+ living alone or State coverage of private accommodation costs exceeding their former protected rent, and a “solidarity surcharge” compensating landlords for long-term restrictions on ownership. By December 2025, 1,349 protected tenancies were registered and as of December 2025, over 300 flats have been returned to landlords. The State has secured the necessary budgetary allocations for the full implementation of the 2024 Law, investing over EUR 15.5 million by October 2025 alone, including transitional rent and relocation costs. It was renovating 600 State-owned flats and building 250–300 new ones, spending EUR 300,000–400,000 monthly on transitional rent. The 2024 Law passed the Constitutional Court' scrutiny. In parallel with the legislative reforms, domestic courts have continued developing case-law to give greater protection of the landlord's property rights. Amongst others, the compensatory remedy, established by the Supreme Court in December 2018 enables landlords to claim compensation covering the difference between the protected rent and the market rent, for the period prior to the adoption of legislative amendments. This remedy has resulted in nearly €5 million being paid out, with 825 civil actions filed by the end of 2025.

▶ Right to education

➤ Schooling of Roma children

Adoption of a wide-range of measures, notably legislative, capacity building and awareness raising measures, to facilitate the enrolment of Roma children in the national education system and monitor their regular attendance. The measures included special instructions and training for teachers.
