

Anne-Laure Bonnet

Anne-Laure Bonnet is a French journalist-presenter. After four years on the editorial staff of the newspaper "L'Equipe", Anne-Laure turned to the audio-visual sector.

It was in England and the United States that she started out doing live coverage of motor sports. Then TF1 then gave her the role of co-presenter of the Formula 1 championship alongside Denis Brogniart.

After one year in France on TF1, she moved to Italy where Sky Italia asked her to be the presenter of Formula 1 racing. She then moved on within Sky to cover Italian football and as Sky Sport News correspondent from Milan.

After four years she returned to French screens by joining beIN SPORTS, mainly covering football, but also handball and cycling. Her multi-lingual abilities and her natural composure in front of the camera were major assets for the channel.

After seven years with the beIN Media Group, she was a major factor in the creation of the Téléfoot channel as presenter of the flagship Sunday evening show.

In addition to her work on the air, Anne-Laure hosts business events and seminars. She is also a debate moderator appreciated for her ability to speak in different languages.

Committed to the world of sport and ecology, she is Patron of the Onda Solidaria association, which aims to help children from disadvantaged neighbourhoods in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, to develop through sport and nature education.