Brief description of the unit

With a brief introduction of "Prejudice and Stereotyping", in first activity participants will read, work in pairs and research different examples of discrimination. They will share the results with the whole class. Reflection is implemented through brainstorming about the "prevention of discrimination" issue and the dangers of stereotypes prejudice. Second activity provides engagement for all students on "first impression" with sharing the views and opinions, tolerance and similarities by recording the answers on chart paper or board. Third activity had trafficking nature. Student are encouraged to search for "Universal Declaration of Human Rights and "Trafficking process and types" and then identify strategies for combating with trafficking and prevention of discrimination. Reflection will be implemented by writing a set of questions on a board and discussions.

Tips for trainers:

- Connect the meaning of stereotypes to prejudice. Teach students that when we form positive or negative opinions based on preconceived stereotyped images or thoughts rather than accurate and complete information, it is called "prejudice." Teach the students that it is a natural function of our brains to organize incoming information (from our senses) into categories to make sense of our world. Emphasize the importance of addressing people as individuals being unique in their thoughts and actions. Explain the students that when we use images of people, events or issues, to make broad generalizations or oversimplified statements it is harmful and called "stereotyping."
- Use group work to raise the students' understanding and awareness of prevention the discrimination and trafficking. Encourage the students to explain their thoughts, discuss the cases and listen for comments.
- > Learner participation in the class discussion and writing prompt will serve as the assessment for the lesson.
- > Discussions in groups could become too hot and raise much noise in the classroom environment, thus in the groups that are comfortable with writing exercises either of the tasks could be set as written work.

Activity 1 What is Stereotype & Prejudice?

	Notes
General aim:
Learners will define Stereotype and Prejudice – so that they will have the necessary skills to analyze the e	ffects these attitudes have on society and to prevent discrimination.
Specific aims:
Learners will:
define and explain the connection between stereotypes & prejudice,
state harmful outcomes of stereotypes & prejudice,
illustrate a stereotype and identify stereotypes illustrated by other students, define the "vocabulary words" for prejudice, stereotype and give examples.
Methods /techniques used:

Appendix 2 - Hand out 2 "If the World Were 100 People"
Appendix 3 - Hand out 3 Actual statistics (for teachers)
Appendix 4 - Hand out 4 "Stereotypes"

Instructions/procedure:
Welcoming participants & Warming
Introduce yourself and present the purpose of the training and the agenda. If you have a small group, you can ask ndividuals to introduce themselves and tell you what they hope to get out of the training. In a larger group, invite volunteers to share their expectations. On your whiteboard jot down some of the specific things participants mention. You can come back to this at the end of the training to make sure you've covered these points. (This activity is designed to serve as a brief icebreaker. It will also give you an idea what participants' expectations and needs are.)
A brief introduction of "Prejudice and Stereotyping"
Prejudice is a baseless and usually negative attitude toward members of a group. Common features of prejudice include negative feelings, stereotyped beliefs, and a tendency to discriminate against members of the group. While specific definitions of prejudice given by social scientists often differ, most agree that it involves prejudgments (usually negative) about members of a group.
When prejudice occurs, stereotyping and discrimination may also result. In many cases, prejudices are based upon stereotypes. A stereotype is a simplified assumption about a group based on prior assumptions. Stereotypes can be both positive ("women are warm and nurturing") or negative ("teenagers are lazy"). Stereotypes can lead to faulty beliefs, but they can also result in both prejudice and discrimination. Prejudice can be based upon a number of factors including sex, race, age, sexual orientations, nationality, socioeconomic status and religion. Some of the most well-known types of prejudice include:
 Racism Sexism Classicism Homophobia Nationalism
 Religious prejudice Ageism

Phase 1 (15 min.) Ask the students to read some definitions of stereotypes (Hand out 1 - Appendix 1). They should work with a partner and think about examples for each piece of information of the definitions. Ask learners to research different examples where individuals have been denied their rights due to discrimination (research may be done on the Internet in the high school library). Encourage them to come up with at least one example that has not yet been mentioned in the class discussion. Share the research results with the whole class. Phase 2 (10 min.) Work in groups. "Stereotyping": Break the learners into groups of four or five to discuss answers, reach consensus and complete the worksheet. Distribute the "If the World Were 100 People" (Hand out 2 – Appendix 2) to each learner. Explain that the learners will take a look at some of their perceptions about the world and compare them with actual world demographics about population, health, wealth and resources. A recorder-student from each group should come to the board and write the statistics their group chose for each item on the worksheet. When all groups have written their information on the board, the teacher should write (or distribute to the groups) the Actual statistics (Appendix 3) and have the class discuss why the actual statistics may vary from the student responses. Phase 3 (10 min.) Distribute the Hand out 4 (Appendix 4) to students in groups and give them time to fill in the final tables "Stereotypes" (Parts 1; 2), followed by relevant discussions in the whole class. ▶ Tips to trainers: As a homework: Look to current events to find examples of prejudice and discrimination in the world. How and where are people treating others unfairly because they don't understand them fully? \geq > Have the learners ask their parents to share with them any instance they know of that would demonstrate prejudice or stereotype. Have the students write these examples on a sheet of paper, in complete sentences, to bring into class to share.

Activity 2 First Impressions

	Notes
General aim:
First impressions of people can often lead to misunderstandings and unfair treatment of others. This lesson will teach learners about the importance of not judging others based on first impressions using appearances as a clue to the personality of a person. Learners will reflect on diversity, the importance of appreciating human similarities, and the necessity for prevention of discrimination and more tolerance when it comes to people differences.
Specific aims:
Make character trait assumptions using various pictures of people,
 Write a list of human similarities,
 Reflect/respond in writing to the questionnaire,
Define the terms assumption, prejudice, stereotype and tolerance.
Methods /techniques used:

Appendix 5 - "Warming" – "Name the people" – Power-point Presentation 1
Appendix 6 - "People pictures" – Power-point Presentation 2
Appendix 7 - Hand out 5 – "What Do You See?"
Practical arrangements:
Prepare: corners with chairs and tables for group works; 2 books + 2 covers (plain & enticing); Power-point presentation-1 Appendix 5 (Warming); Power-point presentation-2 Appendix 6 (People-pictures) and Handout 5

"What Do You See?" (Appendix 7). The pictures of children should be about the age of the learners in the class and should not have any identifying information on them, as far as the learners are to make assumptions based on the physical appearances of the pictures that they are viewing. All the pictures chosen should be general in nature.
Instructions/procedure: The students can work in groups. This exercise is aimed to stimulate the interpersonal intelligence: Power-point presentation-1 of "Name that famous person" (Appendix 5). A "warmer" is a great idea to get the class into communication. For example, during the language lessons the "warmers" are particularly important, relaxing, fun way to slip easily back into using the language. It can be hard for learners to snap back into speaking language again just because they have entered a classroom where you are in charge and you say it is time to speak for example in English. A good warmer can enliven the participants and remind them that it is fun to speak English and that, in fact, they are good at it.
Phase 1 (15 min.)
Write on the board "Don't judge by appearances".
Hold up two books. (Choose a book that is a favourite of the learners and cover it with a plain book cover. Choose another book that the children might think is difficult to read or that they wouldn't be interested in reading. Cover that book with a very enticing book cover). Ask for a show of hands to determine which of the books most of the learners would like to read just by looking at the cover of the books. After the vote has been taken, reveal that the book with the plain cover is actually a favourite of the class and the other one probably is not a book that they would like to read.
Read the phrase on the board and ask the learners to share what they think the phrase means through a set of Questions:
 If they have ever seen or met someone and immediately formed an opinion about what that person was like (either a positive or negative opinion; ask for a show of hands). What criterion they might use to form a "first impression" of someone? (possible responses might include: clothes, hairstyle, body language, tone of voice, etc.) How many students have had to change their "first impression" of someone once they got to know that person better (either a positive or negative opinion). What kind of things might they learn about a person that might cause them to change their opinion (trustworthy, friendly, giving, mean, funny, etc.)? Point out to the learners that "first impressions" are usually based on appearance (the cover of the book). If they have ever made an assumption (first impression opinion) about someone based on their appearance and later found out that it wasn't true? What criterion did they use to make the assumption?

Phase 2 (10 min.)

- Engage the students' groups in a discussion about the words "first impressions" or assuming things about others without much information about them.
- Tell them that when they make general assumptions about people or groups of people, they are stereotyping people. Tell them that stereotyping means a "very simple, often mistaken generalization about a group of people. Stereotypes may be positive or negative but all are unfair and misleading.
- Lead the discussion to consider how we might discriminate against or exclude people by labelling, pre-judging, stereotyping, etc. Ask for or point out examples of contemporary discrimination (action or treatment based on prejudice, or a preconceived opinion). Ask if any of them has been discriminated against, or observed discrimination, because of any of the criteria they sited.

Phase 3 (10 min.)

Tell the learners that you are going to show them some pictures of people. Show the pictures of people by a Powerpoint presentation 2 (Appendix 6).

After they have looked at each picture give each learner a copy of Hand out 5 (Appendix 7 – "What Do You See?") and ask them to respond to the set of questions listed in the table.

- Ask them to share what criterion they use to make the choices that they made under the Character Attributes column and to share why they would or would not like to be friends with that person. Remind them to be respectful of other classmates' answers especially if they do not agree with them.
- Briefly refer back to the start of the lesson about the inability of us to accurately judge a book by its cover. Stress the fact that we cannot make the assumption that because people look a particular way that they are as we perceive them.
- Show each picture once again. To emphasize the similarities of us all, have students brainstorm the things that humans have in common as you record their answers on chart paper or board.

Tips	s to trainers/anticipated difficulties:
As	homework the students could:
A A	Develop a list of criteria used in forming first impressions and determine if these criteria promote respect or disrespect. Consider examples of disrespect.
	riefing/reflecting: Iswers to the following question would briefly summarize the lesson:
	What criterion we might use to form a "first impression" of someone? (possible responses might include: clothes, hairstyle, body language, tone of voice, etc.).

Situation 1

Olga, 23, came to Dubai from Moldova on a visitor visa after hearing about a job opportunity there. A Russian woman and an Indian man picked her up at the airport when she arrived. They took her to their apartment and told her she would instead be prostituted. When she refused, they beat her and threatened to kill her and bury her in the desert. They threatened to harm her if she did not pay them back for her travel expenses, and then sent Olga to a local hotel to meet customers and collect money from them. After two weeks, Olga met another woman from Moldova in the hotel and told her about her condition. The woman advised her to report her situation to the police, who raided the apartment and arrested the suspected traffickers.

Is Olga a trafficking victim? Chose the correct Option from the following list:

- 1. NO, she is a grown-up person and made her own decision on business-immigration to Dubai.
- 2. Yes, she is a victim of Sex and Labour trafficking.
- 3. I don't know.

Situation 2

USA

Alissa, 16, met an older man at a convenience store in Dallas and after a few dates accepted his marriage proposal and invitation to move in with him. But soon Alissa's new "husband" convinced her to be an escort for him, accompanying men on dates and having sex with them for money. He took her to an area known for street prostitution and forced her to hand over all of her earnings. He made Alissa get a tattoo of his nicknames, branding her as his property, and he posted prostitution advertisements with her picture on an Internet site. He rented hotel rooms around Dallas and forced Alissa to have sex with men who responded to the ads. The man, who kept an assault rifle in the closet of his apartment, threatened Alissa and physically assaulted her on multiple occasions. The man later pled guilty to trafficking Alissa.

How would you explain Alisa's situation?

- 1. Marriage.
- 2. Cheated and explored, but not a trafficking victim.
- 3. Trafficking victim.
- 4. I don't know.
