Social insurance scheme providing earnings-related benefits for economically active persons.

REPUBLIC OF MOLDOVA

One of the fundamental principles of the organization and functioning of the public social insurance system is the contributory principle, according to which the social insurance funds are constituted on the basis of the contributions due by the persons participating in the public system, and the social security rights are correlated with the paid social insurance contributions.
Insured persons in the public social insurance system are entitled to indemnity for temporary incapacity for work caused by ordinary illnesses or accidents not related to work, indemnities for temporary incapacity for work caused by industrial injuries or occupational diseases, indemnity for care of the sick child.

The benefit for temporary incapacity for work caused by an industrial injury or occupational disease are granted based on a medical certificate and investigation documents related to the industrial accident or a document confirming occupational disease, issued by competent authorities. The benefit quantum constitutes 100% of the monthly insured wage of the person insured during the last 6 months preceding the industrial accident or occurrence of occupational disease

The benefit for temporary incapacity for work is payable for all working days; during the first 20 calendar days, such payment are covered by the employers, starting with day 21 – by territorial Structures of the National Agency for Social Insurance from Social Insurance Budget resources. This type of indemnity is granted regardless of the contribution period.

The indemnity for temporary incapacity for work caused by ordinary illnesses or accidents not related to work,

Conditions for granting cash benefits:

ARMENIA

The benefits are determined based on the 80 % of calculated average monthly salary (income) of the employee or self-employed individual.

Employee's average monthly salary is calculated as per the rules set out in the Republic of Armenia Labour Code.

Self-employed individual's average monthly salary (income) is determined through dividing by 12 the income for the year preceding the occurrence of temporary disability that is applied in estimation of paid income tax.

In order to calculate the employee's benefit amount given a six-day work week the calculated portion * of the average monthly salary is divided by 25 and multiplied by the number of working days counting from the second working day of the temporary disability period.

In order to calculate the employee's benefit amount given a five-day work week the calculated portion  of the average monthly salary is divided by 21 and multiplied by the number of working days counting from the second working day of the temporary disability period

The average salary (income) applied in the calculation of the allowance amount for a self-employed individual is divided by 30,4 (average number of days in a month) and multiplied by the number of calendar days of temporary disability.

*If the calculated portion exceeds 10 times the amount defined in Article 1 of the RA Law on Minimum Monthly Wages, the benefit is calculated based on an amount that equals 10 times the minimum monthly wage .

 If the calculated portion exceeds 5 times the amount defined in Article 1 of the RA Law on Minimum Monthly Wages, the benefit is calculated based on an amount that equals 5times the minimum monthly wage .

AZERBAIJAN
