EURIMAGES

STRATEGY

FOR GENDER EQUALITY

IN THE FILM INDUSTRY
Eurimages was established in 1989 as a cultural support fund of the Council of Europe. Of the 47 member states of the Organisation, 37 currently participate in Eurimages, plus Canada as an associate member.

The Fund promotes the audiovisual industry by providing financial support to feature-length fiction, animation and documentary films produced in member states. In doing so, it encourages co-operation between professionals who are established in different Eurimages member states.

What is Eurimages?
WHY DOES GENDER EQUALITY MATTER TO EURIMAGES?

As part of the Council of Europe, a pan-European organisation which aims to safeguard human rights and democracy, Eurimages takes a special interest in the question of gender equality in the film industry.

Since 2012, the Fund has collected data on the gender of the holders of key positions in the film projects submitted to it for funding. The results of this research clearly demonstrate that there is under-representation of women in the main film production functions.

THE ROLE OF WOMEN IN PROJECTS SUBMITTED TO EURIMAGES – RESEARCH FINDINGS

From 2014-2016, the average participation by women across the main production functions was just 30%, with varying rates for animation (21%), documentary projects (53%) and fiction (30%). Some 2187 women were counted among a total of 7261 people working on 506 film co-production projects.

These figures confirm what other studies have shown, that jobs appear to be associated with a particular gender. Thus, the share of women in the different functions shows that they are more present in the fields traditionally considered feminine such as costume design and editing and very little in professions classified as more technical, such as those dealing with sound, music and image.
Although the participation of women in the five principal creative functions has registered progress since 2012, it still only represented 26% in all projects in 2016.

Individual projects submitted to Eurimages were also categorised by their gender, that is the proportions of women and men involved in a specific production. The project is “male” or “female” when 60% or more of the job roles are held by men or women. It is “balanced” when the distribution of the roles among men and women is between 40% and 60%. Again, the findings, based on the 506 eligible projects applying for Eurimages support between 2014 and 2016, showed that very few projects could be considered “female”.

As shown by the figures in this brochure, gender imbalance is a dramatic reality. In light of this, Eurimages adopted in October 2015 a comprehensive Strategy to promote gender equality in the European film industry.

This strategy is in line with the Sarajevo Declaration of 14 August 2015, by which Council of Europe member states affirmed the need to reduce inequalities between women and men in the European audiovisual sector and emphasised that a true democracy must make full use of the skills, talents and creativity of women and men alike.

It is also in line with the principles affirmed by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe in its 2009 declaration on making gender equality a reality which states that gender equality is “an integral part of human rights and a fundamental criterion of democracy”.

A Council of Europe Recommendation on gender equality in the audiovisual sector is currently under preparation.
EURIMAGES GENDER EQUALITY STRATEGY IN THE EUROPEAN FILM INDUSTRY

Through this strategy, Eurimages underlines its firm commitment to achieving greater equality in the film industry, by taking action within the Fund, but also by encouraging other film funders at national and regional levels to take this dimension into account. In addition, Eurimages will involve and mobilise civil society organisations active in the film sector, building on their experience and knowledge.

The strategy’s overall goal is to reduce gender inequality in the film industry and to promote the role of women in front of and behind the camera. The measures to be taken and actions to be implemented will be based on the following three strategic objectives:

- mainstreaming a gender equality approach in all policies and measures, taking account of the gender dimension in all processes, including financial, and the allocation of support;

- combating gender stereotypes and sexism in the way women are portrayed in films, by making film-makers aware of this issue;

- preventing and combating violence against women, by raising awareness of the fact that showing a degraded image of women in films can encourage violence, and by enhancing respect for their dignity.
WHAT CONCRETE MEASURES IS THE FUND TAKING?

- Eurimages is assessing disparities and analysing the causes and factors leading to the marginalisation of women in various sectors of the film industry.

- It is encouraging its member states to adopt equality policies aimed at promoting women in the film industry and improving their access to public funding.

- It is also highlighting the work of female film-makers and raising awareness of the status of women, both as regards on-screen representation and in professional terms by:

  ► offering a Best Female Director Prize – worth €30 000 – which is awarded at a different international film festival each year: Istanbul Film Festival in 2016 and Locarno Film Festival in 2017. The 2016 Award Patroness was Anna Serner in recognition of her outstanding pro-gender equality achievements as CEO of the Swedish Film Institute, and the award winner was Anca Damian.

  ► organising quarterly master classes – these will be held throughout Europe and guest film-makers will be invited to share their experiences;

  ► encouraging producers who send applications to the Fund to think about gender balance by asking them to indicate the gender composition of their full cast and crew;

  ► encouraging film-makers to be more sensitive to female representation on screen;

  ► identifying future areas of study and proposing additional measures to strengthen member states’ commitment to a gender equality policy in the film industry.

HOW DOES EURIMAGES SHARE ITS KNOW-HOW?

- The Fund regularly presents its statistics, research findings and working methodologies at conferences, during film festivals and to other national and regional film funds to encourage the development of strategies to redress under-representation in their countries or regions.
