Characteristics

- Gangs
- Family ties/clans
- Networks, no codex
- Parallel societies, antagonistic and isolationist
- Values in conflict with the whole welfare state (tax, education, law, employment etc)
- Criminal corporations
- Variety of crimes, drug trafficking as base income
- Large violence capital - No one is talking, including civilians
- Adaptive and innovative, recruits underaged to avoid criminal responsibility
- International

Challenges to prisons

- Evasions and violent extractions – help from the outside
- Violence against staff – prison sentence a credit/easily triggered
- Violence against other prisoners – segregation to maintain safety, keep fractions separated
- Corruption – bribes, unauthorised influence and threats
- Contraband
- Rehabilitation efforts, hard to reach
- Recruiting in prison

Organised crime is a social problem!

Nevertheless, expectations on law enforcement agencies and correctional services are high.

National level

- High intensity professional prison work
 - Case management
 - Motivational work
 - EXIT programmes
- Interagency cooperation (support)
 - Probation services
 - Social services
 - Employment agencies
- Interagency cooperation (intelligence sharing)
 - Police

Human Rights aspects

- Crisis mode (Sweden) - mobilisation
- Parallels to terrorism and the developments since 9/11
- High risk prisoners – High security regimes
- There may be a need to proactively balance fundamental rights of prisoners, and probationers, and the countermeasures to fight and prevent organised crime
