Planned activity(ies) / Activité(s) envisagée(s) :

The Agency for Access to Public Information (AAIP), the Data Protection Authority of Argentina, is organizing an open and participatory virtual activity to commemorate International Data Protection Day, celebrated every year on 28 January.

The event will take the form of a hackathon focused on the collaborative analysis of privacy policies from both public institutions and private organizations. Participants will work in real time to review these documents and identify common concepts, trends and approaches related to personal data protection in Argentina.

The purpose of the activity is not to audit or assess individual privacy policies, but rather to generate statistical and qualitative information that provides a general overview of how privacy policies are currently

designed and communicated. The findings will subsequently be compiled and published by the AAIP. In addition, the AAIP will launch a public awareness campaign aimed at the general public, with a specific focus on providing recommendations and guidance related to the use and protection of biometric data. Participation in the hackathon is open to the public upon prior registration. Registered participants will receive guidance materials and instructions to take part in the analysis, either independently or through virtual support sessions organized on the day of the event. These initiatives are part of broader efforts to raise awareness of the importance of data protection, in line with the principles established by Convention 108 of the Council of Europe, the only legally binding international treaty in this field. In this context, the AAIP Commissioner, Beatriz Anchorena, who currently serves as Chair of the Committee of Convention 108 (T-PD), will also participate in the Conference to be held in Brussels in the framework of International Data Protection Day.
Place / Lieux : Virtual activity organized from the AAIP headquarters in Buenos Aires, Argentina

Planned activity(ies) / Activité(s) envisagée(s): Conference “Data protection in AI systems”

Place / Lieux: National and University Library, Zagreb, Croatia

Date(s): 28th January 2026

Aim(s) - Who will this activity be aimed at? / Objectif(s) - Type de public visé : representatives from public authorities, academia, SMEs, representatives from banking, financial, telecom, IT industries, DPOs . More information available at: <https://azop.hr/data-protection-day-azop-2026/> . This year’s conference is taking place at a particularly significant moment for European digital policies. The European Commission has proposed amendments to a number of key digital-regulation instruments, including the General Data Protection Regulation Artificial Intelligence Act and the ePrivacy framework. The announced amendments aim to simplify the regulatory framework and foster innovation and the digital economy, while simultaneously raising concerns about maintaining a high level of personal data protection. In the context of these proposed changes, the central part of the conference will be a panel discussion entitled “Digital Omnibus: Deregulation in the Service of Innovation or a Threat to Human Rights?”, focusing on the analysis of the practical effects of the current and future regulatory framework on the development and deployment of AI systems. The discussion will cover the experiences of AI developers, as well as the scientific and academic community, in applying the GDPR and the AI Act, with a particular emphasis on regulatory barriers that may in practice slow down innovation, but also on opportunities to adapt regulations in a way that enables technological progress while preserving a high standard of protection of individual rights. In the second part of the event, Anamarija Mladinić, Vice-Chair of the Consultative Committee of Convention 108, will present the work of the Committee on developing Guidelines on Data Protection in the Context of Large Language Models.

Planned activity(ies) / Activité(s) envisagée(s) :

On 28 January 2026, on the occasion of the Data Protection Day, the Personal Data Protection Service of Georgia plans to conduct privacy awareness lessons and training sessions for both students and teachers of public and private schools.

Specifically, on this day, the President of the Personal Data Protection Service of Georgia, together with its staff members, will visit a number of schools, including those located in close proximity to the occupation line, where access to information and digital safety resources may be more limited and the risks related to misuse of personal data are particularly heightened. Some of these schools are attended by representatives of national minorities, for whom raising awareness about privacy and personal data protection is of particular importance in ensuring inclusive awareness and equal access to information. In this context, raising awareness regarding privacy and personal data protection is of special importance for students and teachers living and working in these areas.

During the visits, students will participate in interactive and age-appropriate awareness lessons, while teachers will be provided with dedicated training sessions aimed at strengthening their knowledge and practical skills in the field of personal data protection. Participants will be introduced to key topics related to personal data protection, including the concept of personal data, the fundamental principles and legal grounds for data processing, as well as the main challenges in the field of personal data protection. Particular attention will also be paid to online safety rules, safe use of digital platforms, and responsible digital citizenship.

To ensure effective learning and active participation, the program includes specially developed educational video materials, interactive and engaging activities, and a final assessment test, all designed to help students better understand the importance of protecting personal data and respecting privacy from an early age, and to equip teachers with the necessary tools to support and guide students in the safe and responsible use of the digital environment.

It is noteworthy that the Personal Data Protection Service of Georgia has been systematically conducting privacy lessons and training activities for school students and teachers since 1 February 2025, reflecting its ongoing commitment to promoting data protection awareness among the school community and fostering a culture of privacy, digital resilience, and responsible use of technology, particularly in vulnerable and high-risk areas.

Place / Lieux :

Meetings for school students and teachers will take place at the following locations:

- The Iakob Gogebashvili School in Kiketi;
- Three schools of the Marneuli Municipality, Kvemo Kartli region;
- Three villages of the Gori Municipality, Shida Kartli region (Pkhvenisi, Nikozi, Khviti);
- Schools in the Sachkhere Municipality;
- Schools in the Kareli Municipality.

Date(s) : 28 January 2026

Aim(s) - Who will this activity be aimed at? / Objectif(s) - Type de public visé :

The target audience of the activities is school students and teachers, including those from schools attended by representatives of national minorities. As part of the program, students and teachers will learn why personal data protection is important in everyday life and how personal information can be affected in the digital and online environment. Through practical examples and interactive discussions, participants will be encouraged to identify and assess the risks that may arise from the unlawful, careless, or thoughtless disclosure of personal data, both online and offline.

The sessions will also help participants develop essential internet safety skills, including how to protect privacy on social media, recognize unsafe online behavior, and make responsible choices when using digital platforms. By strengthening these skills, students and teachers will become more confident, responsible, and informed users of digital technologies, and teachers will be better equipped to support and guide students in safe and responsible use of the online environment, ensuring inclusive awareness and equal access to information for all students.

Publicity envisaged (type of media) / Publicité envisagée (type de support) :

The planned event will be published on the official website of the Personal Data Protection Service of Georgia (www.pdps.ge) and on its social media platform (Facebook).

DZIEŃ OCHRONY DANYCH OSOBOWYCH

Planned activity(ies) / Activité(s) envisagée(s) :

On 28 January 2026, on the occasion of Data Protection Day, the Data Protection and New Technologies Congress will take place at the Museum of Polish History in Warsaw. The event is organised by the Personal Data Protection Office together with the National Council of Legal Advisers (KIRP) and serves as a high-level forum for discussion on the most pressing challenges at the intersection of data protection law and technological development.

The Congress programme focuses on the future of data protection in a rapidly evolving digital environment. One of the central themes is the future of the GDPR, including reflections on ten years of its application, lessons learned from supervisory and judicial practice, and possible directions for further regulatory development in the European Union.

A significant part of the agenda is devoted to artificial intelligence and data protection, addressing both regulatory and practical aspects of AI deployment. Panel discussions will explore how AI systems interact with fundamental rights, how existing data protection principles apply to automated decision-making, and how emerging AI-specific regulation reshapes the compliance landscape.

The programme also includes sessions on new technologies in employment, examining the use of algorithmic management, monitoring tools and AI-based recruitment systems, as well as their implications for employee privacy and labour rights. Another important topic concerns the protection of minors online, with discussions focusing on digital platforms, content moderation and safeguards for children in the digital environment.

Further panels will address deepfakes and cybercrime, analysing their impact on individual rights, democratic processes and trust in digital information. The Congress will also explore quantum technologies, considering their potential consequences for data security, encryption and long-term data protection strategies.

In addition, the programme covers new technologies in medicine, including the processing of sensitive health data, secondary use of medical data for research purposes and the balance between innovation and the protection of patients' rights. Broader reflections on ethics and digital transformation complement the legal and technical discussions, highlighting the societal dimension of data protection.

The full programme of the Congress is available here: <https://uodo.gov.pl/pl/643/4035>

During the Congress, the Michał Serzycki Award will be presented. The award honours individuals who have made exceptional contributions to the protection of personal data and the right to privacy, commemorating Michał Serzycki, the first President of the Polish data protection authority. It recognises achievements that have had a lasting impact on the development and promotion of data protection standards in Poland.
