COUNCIL OF EUROPE

CONSEIL DE L'EUROPE

The work of the Council of Europe to strengthen democracy relies heavily on both formal and non-formal education, including human rights education and education for democratic citizenship. Hate speech is one of the most worrying forms of racism and discrimination across Europe, and it is further amplified by the Internet and social media. Hate speech online represents only the visible tip of the iceberg of intolerance. Young people are particularly affected by online violations of human rights.

BOOKMARKS was originally published to support the Council of Europe's No Hate Speech Movement youth campaign for human rights online. It is a valuable resource for educators who want to address hate speech online from a human rights perspective. The manual is designed for working with young people aged 13 to 18, though its activities can be adapted for other age groups.

BOOKMARS is published by the youth sector of the Council of Europe, which is the continent's leading human rights organisation. It comprises 46 member states, including all members of the European Union. All Council of Europe member states have signed up to the European Convention on Human Rights, a treaty designed to protect human rights, democracy and the rule of law. The European Court of Human Rights oversees the implementation of the Convention in the member states.
