GME(2024)R2

AD HOC MULTIDISCIPLINARY GROUP ON THE ENVIRONMENT (GME)

2nd meeting
9–11 December 2024

MEETING REPORT

1. OPENING OF THE MEETING BY THE CHAIR OF THE GME

The Ad hoc Multidisciplinary Group on the Environment (GME) held its 2nd meeting in Strasbourg on 9-11 DECEMBER 2024. The meeting was opened by the Chair, Ms Maria DIAMANTOPOULOU, she welcomed the participants.

2. ADOPTION OF THE REPORT OF THE 1ST GME MEETING, AND OF THE AGENDA OF THE 2ND MEETING

The GME adopted the report of the 1st meeting (GME(2024)R1) and the agenda of the 2nd meeting as it appears in Appendix I.

3. DEVELOPMENTS CONCERNING THE COUNCIL OF EUROPE

The GME took note of the recent developments concerning the Council of Europe (CoE) activities on the environment presented by the Secretariat.

The GME was informed of the internal strategy and Action Plan within the CoE regarding the organisation's carbon footprint and leading to a reduction in greenhouse gas emissions. The Committee of Ministers is currently working on the document.

Regarding the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (PACE), it adopted the following recommendations:

- PACE/Recommendation2273\(2024\) Towards Council of Europe strategies for healthy seas and oceans to counter the climate crisis
- PACE/Recommendation2286\(2024\) Guaranteeing the human right to food, referring its Resolution PACE/Resolution2577\(2024\).

Regarding the Committee of Ministers, it adopted a Recommendation on young people and climate action (CM/Rec\(2024\)6).

Regarding the Steering Committee for Human Rights (CDDH), it completed its mandate on the need and feasibility of an instrument guaranteeing the right to a clean and healthy environment. The report and its conclusions were transmitted to the Committee of Ministers for consideration.

Dr Nicola WENZEL, representing the CDDH, reported that even though the report and its conclusions were discussed at lengths, Member-States were quite divided. Indeed, while some supported an additional instrument, others contended that the ongoing development of the Court's case-law on this subject was sufficient.

Regarding the European Committee on Crime Problems (CDPC), it finalised the work on the draft Convention on the protection of the environment through criminal law. It has been submitted to the Committee of Ministers. The Convention is expected to be open to signature during the Council of Europe's Ministerial Conference in May 2025.

Regarding the Congress of Local and Regional Authorities of the Council of Europe (Congress), it adopted two recommendations of interest to the work of the GME:

- Recommendation 512\(2024\) Fostering a circular economy at local and regional levels
- Recommendation 510\(2024\) Local and regional responses to natural disasters and climate hazards: from risk preparedness to resilience

Regarding the Bern Convention, Ms Merike LINNAMÄGI, former Chair of the Standing Committee of the Bern Convention, presented the latest updates concerning the Convention and notably the decision to modify the protection status of the wolf from "strictly protected" (Appendix II) to "protected" (Appendix III). She also mentioned the financing of the Bern Convention, which should be made sustainable despite a recent increase in the CoE ordinary budget but a noticeable reduction in the amount of voluntary contributions. The idea of a CoE Environmental Trust Fund was welcomed with interest by the members of the Bern Standing Committee.

Regarding the Landscape Convention, it held its 12th Conference in October 2024 which relaunched the activities and multilateral cooperation in the field. The Parties to the Convention approved a report and draft recommendation on Landscape and Health and submitted it to the Committee of Ministers for adoption.

Regarding the European Committee on Social Rights (ECSR), the GME was informed that the Committee was actively discussing social rights related to the environment.

It was also brought to the attention of the GME that the Secretary General participated in the COP 29 in Baku, Azerbaijan, last November, and held several bilateral meetings with heads of States and the civil society.

The GME was also informed about the financing of environmental activities, and the fact that the Council of Europe relies on both its ordinary budget and extra-budgetary resources to fund its Strategy. While the core budget is limited, additional funds are essential to implement the Strategy's goals. Following the Reykjavik Summit, there has been an increase in environment related projects. The idea of a possible Trust Fund was raised. This Fund has 3 key parameters: Firstly, its supplementary aspect to the ordinary budget would ensure additional flexibility. Secondly, contributors would have the capacity to earmark their contributions while preserving the capacity for the non-earmarked contributions to serve the Strategy as a whole. Lastly, it would coordinate further synergies and cooperation projects.

4. COMPENDIUM OF THE COUNCIL OF EUROPE ACTIVITIES ON THE ENVIRONMENT

The Secretariat informed the GME that in the context of the Reykjavík process, the Secretary General decided to establish an Intersecretariat Task Force on the Environment. The Task Force was charged with a mapping exercise on current and future activities of the CoE on the environment. The compilation of the contributions constitutes the Compendium.

The GME considered an initial version of the Compendium at its first meeting and the updated version (GME\(2024\)2rev) during the current meeting.

The GME endorsed the revised version of the Compendium and requested the Secretariat to send it to the Committee of Ministers, as the first deliverable indicated in its terms of reference.

5. EXCHANGE OF VIEWS WITH Ms MEROPI-SPYRIDOULA YDRAIOU, SPOKEPERSON ON ENVIRONMENT AND CLIMATE CHANGE FOR THE CONGRESS OF LOCAL AND REGIONAL AUTHORITIES OF THE COUNCIL OF EUROPE

Ms Meropi-Spyridoula YDRAIOU, presented the work of the Congress relevant for the GME work. She highlighted that local governments play a crucial role in addressing the triple planetary crisis of pollution, climate change, and biodiversity loss, making decisions on a daily basis that impact the environment. The Congress contributes by producing reports on key environmental issues like natural disasters, circular economy, and water resources. It also published a Human Rights Handbook on sustainable development at the local level, sharing good practices from municipalities. She highlighted that the Reykjavik Declaration emphasised the need for cooperation between different government levels to tackle environmental crises.

The Congress proposed an Additional Protocol to the European Charter of Local Self-Government, aimed at increasing local authorities' awareness of environmental protection and integrating it into their daily actions. This protocol would clarify local and regional responsibilities, enhance governance, and promote resilience to climate risks. It would also offer training and support for local authorities and encourage the use of new technologies. The protocol would benefit member States by demonstrating commitment to multilevel governance, and its implementation could build on existing monitoring processes. The Congress believed the protocol, backed by member States, would be more effective than non-binding guidelines, ensuring that local authorities can leverage their strengths in environmental protection.

Ms Meropi-Spyridoula YDRAIOU concluded that local and regional authorities, as frontline actors, must work alongside national governments to achieve shared environmental goals.

6. EXCHANGE OF VIEWS WITH Ms AOIFE NOLAN, CHAIR OF THE COUNCIL OF EUROPE'S EUROPEAN COMMITTEE OF SOCIAL RIGHTS

Ms Aoife NOLAN presented the role of the European Social Charter (ESC) in addressing environmental and human rights issues to the GME. While there is no equivalent to Article 46 of the European Convention on Human Rights, obliging member States to comply with the decisions of the ESC, the findings of the European Committee of Social Rights (ECSR) legal assessments of conformity or non-conformity remain significant. The ESC aimed to create a unified body of jurisprudence and standards.

Over the past year, the ECSR's work addressed issues like air pollution in mining companies, with the most important development being the recognition of the "right to protection of health" under Article 11 of the ESC. However, the right to a healthy environment was not fully developed in the complaint system, creating a gap. States were expected to apply the precautionary principle to environmental protection.

Ms NOLAN insisted that the Strategy needs to encompass the full scope of human rights and case law, especially as the ESC provides extensive protection of youth rights, which is unique in Europe. She noted that energy issues were not mentioned in the draft Strategy, despite their central role in climate change and the cost-of-living crisis. Reports highlighted the need to reduce financial burdens on vulnerable groups, emphasising intergenerational equity.

Two reasons were presented for including the ESC in the Strategy: it is the best instrument at the Council of Europe level for tackling environmental issues. Furthermore, its strong accountability system goes beyond climate litigation. The ESC has shown its ability to address contemporary social challenges and is crucial to ensure non-discrimination in areas such as socio-economic status, and geographical location. The Chair of the ECSR concluded by affirming the willingness of the Committee to continue conversing and collaborating on the draft Strategy.

Ms NOLAN's presentation was followed by discussions with the Member States from which it emerged that the integration of the ESC in the Strategy must be mindful of States that have not ratified it.

7. EXCHANGE OF VIEWS WITH Mr TOMÁŠ BOČEK, VICE-GOVERNOR OF THE COUNCIL OF EUROPE DEVELOPMENT BANK

Mr Tomáš BOČEK informed the GME of the work of the Council of Europe Development Bank (CEB) and how the CEB has been addressing the social dimensions of the triple planetary crisis—climate change, pollution, and biodiversity loss. As a multilateral development bank with a social mandate, the CEB has evolved to focus on the intersection of environmental and social issues, aiming to protect human rights and promote social cohesion across Europe.

In 2023, the CEB integrated climate change into its strategic framework, financing social projects that promote climate resilience. The CEB focuses on sectors like gender equality, climate action, and digitalization. Around 60% of its 2024 projects include climate change mitigation or adaptation measures.

The Bank uses a “vulnerability lens” to prioritise support for the most affected populations, such as funding flood defence systems to protect communities in marginalised situations. The CEB also aligns its operations with the Paris Agreement, ensuring that its projects promote both environmental sustainability and social inclusion.

The CEB supports a just transition to a green economy, financing projects that reduce climate-related risks while fostering social equity. Indeed, there is a need for equitable and inclusive solutions, a sustainable economy must leave no one behind. The CEB expressed its readiness to support the work of the GME in tackling the triple planetary crisis through its technical expertise and financial means.

The intervention of Mr BOČEK was followed by a discussion with the participants during which multiple questions were raised, including how the Strategy could benefit from the CEB's experience.

8. EXCHANGE OF VIEWS WITH REPRESENTATIVES OF INTERNATIONAL ORGANISATIONS

Office of the High Commission for Human Rights (OHCHR)

Ms Nela CERNOTA (Associate Human Rights Officer) made general comments on the draft Strategy, including the need for human rights to be central, the need for a greater focus on gender equality and intersectionality, businesses must be treated as duty-bearers in environmental and human rights protection and that she insisted on the need for the right to a healthy environment to be clearly integrated in the Strategy. Nature-based solutions must be carefully implemented to avoid exacerbating inequalities, and green financial tools should respect human rights, including gender equality.

Ms CERNOTA suggested that the draft Strategy should use the terms "individuals and communities in vulnerable situations" instead of "vulnerable and marginalised groups", have them participation in decision-making, and prioritise cooperation with other organisations to harmonise best practices.

Furthermore, transparency should include human rights impacts, and protections for Environmental Human Rights Defenders should cover broader threats such as arbitrary detention and violence.

Ms CERNOTA concluded by suggesting that, in the Action Plan, actions should be organised under each priority for better accountability and progress monitoring and that human rights should be integrated into all actions.

International Union for the Conservation of Nature (IUCN)

Ms Agnès MICHELOT (member of the WCEL Steering Committee) highlighted the crucial link between biodiversity protection and climate action, noting the European Court of Human Rights' role in expanding human rights protection. She advocated for the Council of Europe (CoE) to follow PACE's call (PACE/Recommendation 2211\(2021\)) Anchoring the right to a healthy environment: need for an enhanced action by the CoE) for an additional protocol to clarify the right to a healthy environment. This right, she argued, was essential for environmental protection and should be based on four principles: duties towards future generations, the precautionary principle, non-regression, and collective rights.

She called for integrating the One Health approach into the strategy. One Health is an integrated, unifying approach that aimed to sustainable balance and optimise the health of people, animals and ecosystems, developed by the World Health Organisation. Strengthening legal indicators and promoting nature-based solutions aligned with EU initiatives were also key. Additionally, protecting scientific integrity, supporting participation, and defending whistleblowers were critical.

United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC)

Ms Aiping CHEN (Special Assistant to the Senior Director) underscored the recent global discussions concerning the urgency of tackling the intertwined crisis of pollution, climate change, and biodiversity loss, disproportionately affecting vulnerable populations and exacerbating inequality. She highlighted that the recognition of a healthy environment as a human right must be supported by stronger legal protections and that effective climate action also required inclusive governance, ensuring that all voices, especially marginalised groups, were heard.

Finally, she recalled that, robust accountability mechanisms were crucial to ensure countries uphold their environmental commitments. Ms CHEN concluded by highlighting that collective action rooted in human rights and the rule of law was essential for securing a sustainable future for all.

9. HEARING WITH CIVIL SOCIETY

The GME held an exchange of views with representatives of civil society. The latter widely agreed on the importance of explicitly including the right to a clean and healthy and sustainable environment in the draft Strategy and to emphasise that people and nature were not separate. The critical role of civil society in combatting the triple planetary crisis was also highlighted and it was indicated that mechanisms for civil participation and transparency in dialogues with civil society should be further developed.

The presentations also focused on the need to adopt an integrated approach and to improve access to justice for vulnerable populations, as well as the need to train legal professionals on environmental challenges. International environmental crimes such as wildlife trafficking and corruption should also be considered in the draft Strategy.

The need for a binding human rights instrument was reiterated throughout the NGOs interventions and several of the organisations expressed their support for an additional protocol to the European Convention on Human Rights.

Overall, the civil society representatives welcomed the draft Strategy and emphasised that the Council of Europe must maintain its clear role in standards setting throughout this initiative.

The presentations were followed by discussions with the members of the GME on how to better integrate the recommendations and how to enhance support for the civil society.

10. HEARING WITH CHILDREN AND YOUTH

The European Youth Forum, the Young Nature Friends, Youth Environment Europe, the Young European Green and the Advisory Council of Youth intervened. Friend Justice, representing children, also made a presentation together with moving testimonies.

The Youth organisations all insisted on the central role they can play in promoting sustainability. Indeed, they put forward that they should not only be considered as future stakeholders but also be recognised as current citizens with a vital role in decision-making. They also stressed the need for accountability mechanisms notably regarding the activities of private actors.

Furthermore, the representatives of youth organisations shared concerns regarding legal abuses that environmental defenders face. To protect them, they proposed that access to justice and legal support must be reinforced. They also mentioned the vilification of environmental defenders and the preventive arrests some of them encounter.

Another crucial point in the hearing was that all children should have the same right to be informed and therefore climate education should be further developed and made accessible to all. Children representatives highlighted that the environmental crisis is a children's rights crisis as climate change threatens the most basic aspects of life and that no one should be left behind including young people who are mentally and physically impacted by climate change. They stressed that this was why a human rights-based approach was crucial. It was also emphasised that people with disabilities should be further integrated in the draft Strategy.

The Council of Europe Advisory Council of Youth explained that they were very active on environmental issues because it was a top priority for young people. Youth representatives said they felt generally positive on the draft Strategy as it builds on the Reykjavik Declaration. However, it was expressed that it was essential that the Strategy adopts a rights-based approach and while they called for strengthening youth-specific language this should not inadvertently exclude other groups.

The hearings were followed by discussions with the GME on how to concretely bring those concerns into actions. Environmental NGOs expressed support towards the propositions of the youth and children organisations.

The Chair of the GME thanked all the representatives of civil society, youth and international organisation as well as representatives of the Congress, ECSR and CEB that intervened, and highlighted the quality of those exchanges of views. She stated that the GME will consider these inputs in its subsequent work.

11. IDENTIFICATION OF THE CHALLENGES OF THE TRIPLE PLANETARY CRISIS: POLLUTION, CLIMATE CHANGE AND BIODIVERSITY LOSS, FOR HUMAN RIGHTS, DEMOCRACY AND THE RULE OF LAW IN MEMBER STATES: INITIAL EXAMINATION OF THE WRITTEN CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED

The Secretariat informed the GME of the results of the written contributions received. He announced that, considering the contributions received, it emerged that the triple planetary crisis is a systematic threat to human rights, the rule of law and democracy. The Council of Europe has therefore a clear role to play in addressing those interconnected challenges.

In total 21 contributions were received from members, participants and observers. It was recalled that it was very important for the CoE to capitalise on its historic strengths to have an overview of the challenges encountered. He also recalled that the CoE has a long-standing cooperation with other International Organisations and MEAs and that those synergies should be encouraged and deepened.

Member States stressed the importance of not duplicating what is already being undertaken in other instruments and other international fora, and that there should be a focus on the areas where the CoE has a comparative advantage.

The representative of the Conference of INGOs called again for the inclusion of the right to a healthy, clean and sustainable environment in the draft Strategy.

12. PREPARATION OF A COUNCIL OF EUROPE STRATEGY ON THE ENVIRONMENT

The participants to the GME discussed the text of the draft Strategy on the Environment. They made general comments regarding the draft but also commented specific points of the current draft (GME \(2024\)10).

Members of the GME agreed on the need to avoid overlaps with other international conventions or instruments. Indeed, it was reiterated that the Council of Europe has an expertise in human rights, democracy and the rule of law, and those areas as well as existing infrastructures must be focused on. It also emerged from the discussions that the text of the draft Strategy could benefit from being more specific, cohesive and shorter. Indeed, the members of the GME asked for more clarity notably regarding the recipients and timeline of the Strategy.

Furthermore, the members of the GME expressed the need for the Action Plan and the Strategy to match the text of the Reykjavík Declaration

Another key concern highlighted by the GME was the need to use the language that was internationally agreed on at Kunming-Montreal or used in the Convention on Biological Diversity as well as with other Multilateral Environmental Agreements (MEAs).

The GME also considered that the notion of “stakeholder” in paragraph 6 of the draft Strategy should be clarified. While some advocated for a narrower approach, others favoured a broader approach to the term of “stakeholder”.

The reference to the Aarhus Convention was also largely discussed as many observers considered it should be included in the Strategy while some member States had reservations, considering not all of them were parties to the Convention.

Observers widely considered that there should be a better demonstration of the intersection of human rights and the environment through a right-based approach. They reiterated their call for the inclusion of the right to a healthy environment in the Strategy. The Youth organisations also reminded the GME of their key requests regarding the Environment notably the inclusion of Youth specific language and a wider role in decision-making processes.

The Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (PACE), supported by several members of the GME, expressed that the Action Plan should be aligned with the Strategy instead of the Council of Europe Programme and Budget as some objectives, such as Business and Human Rights, were not reflected in the Action Plan. Furthermore, PACE added that the Action Plan should include concrete results, methods and expected outcomes to achieve the strategic objectives.

13. ELECTION OF A BUREAU MEMBER

The GME was informed of the departure of its Vice-Chair, Ms Nino LATSABIDZE (Georgia) from the Bureau of the GME due to her secondment to the Secretariat of the GME. The GME elected Ms Ruzanna GRIGORYAN (Armenia) as the new member of the Bureau in accordance with Resolution CM/Res\(2021\)3. Ms Charlotte BLONDEL (France) was elected Vice-Chair of the Bureau.
