Human Rights Education for Legal Professionals (HELP) Programme

2023

Background

In many states around the world, LGBTI persons are subject to serious human rights violations on account of their real or perceived sexual orientation, gender identity or expression and sex characteristics (SOGIESC), particularly when these do not conform to dominant social and cultural norms. Persecution, including discrimination from both State and non-State actors force LGBTI persons to flee their countries of origin or places of habitual residence in search of a safe environment in which they can freely express their SOGIESC.

Often, LGBTI persons seeking international protection experience barriers to the adjudication of their asylum claims. It follows from the Summary Conclusions of the 2021 Global Roundtable on Protection and Solutions for LGBTIQ+ People in Forced Displacement that “some caseworkers, lawyers and asylum adjudicators lack a sufficiently nuanced understanding of what sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression and sex characteristics entail. Notable challenges in the legal protection of LGBTIQ+ asylum seekers include evidentiary burdens in asylum claims; challenges in satisfying criteria for well-founded fear and/or membership of a particular social group; jurisprudential and credibility challenges; and implicit biases and/or stereotypes held by caseworkers, lawyers and asylum adjudicators.”

According to the second comprehensive review of the implementation of the CoE Recommendation CM/Rec (2010)5 to member states on measures to combat discrimination based on sexual orientation or gender identity, the training of asylum officials remains a key issue. The CoE Commissioner for Human Rights, Dunja Mijatovic, expressed concern regarding the protection of LGBTI asylum seekers in Europe, and found that there is an urgent need for practical guidance and training for all those involved in the asylum procedure. In addition, the need to improve the training of decision-makers dealing with asylum claims by LGBTI people was also highlighted by the European Commission in its LGBTIQ Strategy 2020-2025 and by UNHCR and the United Nations Independent Expert on Protection Against Violence and Discrimination Based on Sexual Orientation and Gender Identity in their Summary Conclusions of the 2021 Global Roundtable on Protection and Solutions for LGBTIQ+ People in Forced Displacement.

To increase the capacity of legal professionals dealing with asylum claims based on SOGIESC, through the HELP module on LGBTI Persons in the Asylum Procedure, professionals will learn about the key concepts and stereotypes or incorrect assumptions in adjudicating cases involving LGBTI persons, international standards and how they have been applied by national asylum authorities and courts across Europe, as well as relevant case-law. By the end of the course, they will have a better understanding of the rights of LGBTI asylum-seekers in different stages of their asylum-claim, of the substantive and procedural aspects. Consequently, they will be better equipped to assess asylum claims based on SOGIESC grounds and to apply a human rights approach throughout the decision-making process.
