EXECUTION OF THE EUROPEAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS' JUDGMENTS MAIN ACHIEVEMENTS IN MEMBER STATES

The present survey presents short summaries¹ of a selection of the main reforms and achievements reported in final resolutions since the Convention system was amended in 1998 by Protocol No. 11, with a clear focus on recent reforms referring, however, also to important earlier developments.

In view of the wealth of cases closed, the selection concentrates on those which have led to changes of legislation or government regulations or the adoption of new policies or general guidelines from superior courts. As a rule, the survey does not cover information on measures aiming at providing individual redress to applicants.

The presentation is organised country-by-country and reforms are, in principle, presented in the order corresponding to the thematic domains used in the Council of Europe's specialised database HUDOC EXEC and the Committee of Ministers' Annual Reports on the Supervision of the Execution of the European Court of Human Rights' judgments.

Many reforms address issues which appear to be on-going challenges in the member State. The effects of reforms adopted at one point in time may thus need to be monitored and possibly re-evaluated as conditions change.²

¹ The summaries are the sole responsibility of the Department for the execution of the judgments of the European Court of Human Rights.

² The presentation is limited to the information provided at the time of the adoption of the final resolution. It is recalled in this context that the Committee of Ministers has issued Recommendation \(2004\)5 on the verification of the compatibility of draft laws, existing laws and administrative practice with standards laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights.

➤ Right to life

➤ Protection against domestic violence

In 2019, a Government Protocol for Responding to Domestic Violence determined general principles for action of the police, judiciary, health practitioners, probation officers, social welfare centres and other competent authorities. Seven victim assistance offices were put in place. In 2011 and 2015, amendments to the Criminal Code introduced a definition of the offences of “domestic violence in a family” and “family-related crimes of particular gravity” as well as protective measures against perpetrators such as compulsory psychological and social treatment, restraining orders, removal from a household and protective supervision following to the release from prison. In 2020, a minimum prison sentence of one year was introduced for the crime of domestic violence.

➤ Investigations into crimes committed during the Croatian Homeland War

New regulations ensure that war crimes are investigated by independent police units. The different proceedings stayed during the “Homeland War” were resumed by special legislation in 2003.

➤ Lack of effective investigations into war crimes

In 2011, the Strategy for Investigation and Prosecution of War Crimes was adopted improving cooperation between prosecutors and the police in prosecution of war crimes. Regional cooperation was enhanced, through bilateral agreements on war crime investigations between neighbouring countries and meetings of regional prosecutors and representatives of ministries of justice. In 2019/21 the State Attorney General requested that all war crime cases, including the ones in the stages of inquiries be transferred to the specialised judicial and investigatory structures established for war crimes prosecution. Special structures responsible for investigating war crimes (four state attorney’s offices, four county courts, and specialised police force) were established. In 2013, victims’ involvement in criminal investigations and public scrutiny was enhanced. In 2014 the possibility to request the review of the effectiveness of criminal investigations (including into war crimes) was introduced before the Constitutional Court as an effective remedy. In 2019, the Act on the Missing Persons in the Homeland War was adopted prescribing procedures, competence, record keeping and other aspects of search, exhumation and identification of missing persons, and providing a higher degree of protection for family members of missing persons.

➤ Investigations into alleged ill-treatment by the police

In 2011, the Criminal Procedure Code introduced the principle of prosecutorial investigation. In 2013, amendments introduced strict time-limits, a new system of legal remedies and a higher level of victim participation. In 2014, the Constitutional Court changed the Constitutional Court Rules to be able to order the prosecuting authorities to carry out specific procedural steps aimed at identifying perpetrators and to award a victim compensation for damages.

Amendments of 2014 to the Act on Police Work and Powers provided that, in case of suspicion of a criminal offence committed by a police officer, investigative steps are to be conducted by a different organisational unit. Amendments of 2015 strengthened disciplinary responsibility for police negligence. According to the 2019 amendment to the Police Act, the Complaints Board consists of nine members appointed by Parliament, representing civil society, public institutions and NGOs. In 2019, amendments to the Ministry of Interior's Internal Regulation ensured a higher degree of independence and impartiality of police officers working in internal control units.

Furthermore, an electronic custody records system for interrogations was introduced in 2011. In 2017, the Criminal Procedure Code was amended to prevent excessive use of force and to ensure independent oversight of investigations into allegations of police misconduct. These amendments also prohibit police officers to interrogate suspects through informal questioning. Suspects may exercise the right to a lawyer from the moment of acquiring the capacity of suspect. In addition, a suspect's interview must be recorded with an audio-visual device. Finally, according to the European Court's decision in Kušić and Others (71667/17), the possibility of a constitutional complaint provides for effective investigations into allegations under Articles 2 and 3.

➤ Investigations into allegations of ill-treatment by prison guards

In 2018 the Prison Administration took steps to intensify inspection in prisons, including by introducing video surveillance in prisons. Following the CPT visit in 2017, the Ministry of Justice established a special department for monitoring and supervising the work of the prison staff. It also conducts investigations into actions of prison officers, including upon the cellmates' complaints. In 2013 the Act on the Execution of the Prison Sentence has been amended, enabling the judicial protection of prisoners' complaints concerning alleged ill-treatment (previously, their complaints were dealt with only by prison administration). In February 2021, a new Act on the Execution of the Prison Sentence has been adopted, as well as the relevant by-laws, further standardising the use of means of coercion by prison staff.

➤ Prison conditions

Several prisons were renovated between 2012 to 2014, including heating systems and sanitary facilities. As concerns medical treatment, additional medical staff was recruited. Finally, the 2013 Law on Compulsory Medical Insurance provided for compulsory medical insurance for all prisoners. Prisons were affiliated to the public IT health system in 2019.

To address the issue of overcrowding, the Probation Act 2010 introduced a probation service to advise domestic courts on appropriate sanctions. The 2011 Criminal Procedure Code, as amended in 2012 and 2013, introduced alternative sanctions such as community work.

➤ Protection against ill-treatment in case of action by thirds parties

➤ Physical restraints in psychiatric hospitals

M.S. (No.2) (75450/12)

Final Resolution

The 2014 Protection of Individuals with Mental Disorders Act introduced a tight timeframe for psychiatric hospitals to examine allegations raised by persons with mental disorders subject to involuntary placement. In 2015, the Ministry of Health's regulation governing involuntary placement to psychiatric institutions codified the rules of conduct of medical staff when applying compulsory measures of restraint and introduced an obligation for psychiatric hospitals to issue internal guidelines governing the respective procedures.

► Functioning of justice

► Fairness of proceedings / Criminal proceedings

The Code of Criminal Procedure, which entered into force in 2011, transferred the competence to conduct pre-trial criminal investigations from the Police to the State Attorneys. In 2014, the Ministry of Justice's Rules provided that State Attorneys have an obligation to keep detailed records of interrogations and to document procedures and decisions. Moreover, with regard to alleged breaches of defence rights in criminal proceedings, domestic courts, and in particular the Supreme Court and the Constitutional Court, aligned their case-law to the present judgment.

► Expert evidence in criminal proceedings

Since 2015, the new Act on Protection of Individuals with Mental Disorders provides that the necessity of a defendant's psychiatric detention shall be assessed on the basis of an expert assessment, allowing a judge to order a less intrusive measure. Earlier, in 2013, an amendment to the Criminal Procedure Code had introduced the possibility of a defendant's treatment outside psychiatric hospitals, abolishing mandatory internment.

With regard to acceleratory and compensatory remedies in civil proceedings, between 2002 and 2005, it was in the Constitutional Court's competence to set time-limits for the lower courts and to award compensation. In the 2005 Courts Act, this competence was restricted to cases pending before the Supreme Court as for other pending cases ordinary higher courts could decide. Subsequently, the amendments to the Civil Procedure Code of 2013 streamlined the procedure, fixed tight deadlines and addressed the issue of insufficient compensation. The Constitutional Court remains competent as a last resort.

In 2014 the Enforcement Act was amended and a dedicated authority, the Financial Agency, was set up to enforce writs of execution in a diligent manner. In 2015, IT solutions enabling the Agency to sell movable and immovable properties at electronic public auctions were introduced. Thus, excessive delays in enforcement proceedings with regard to all types of property (bank accounts, movable and immovable property) could be prevented. As regards immovable property, an amendment to the Enforcement Act of 2017 introduced safeguards for debtors preventing double payments, thereby eliminating a cause for delays in proceedings.
