EXECUTION OF THE EUROPEAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS' JUDGMENTS

MAIN ACHIEVEMENTS IN MEMBER STATES

The present survey presents short summaries¹ of a selection of the main reforms and achievements reported in final resolutions since the Convention system was amended in 1998 by Protocol No. 11, with a clear focus on recent reforms referring, however, also to important earlier developments.

In view of the wealth of cases closed, the selection concentrates on those which have led to changes of legislation or government regulations or the adoption of new policies or general guidelines from superior courts. As a rule, the survey does not cover information on measures aiming at providing individual redress to applicants.

The presentation is organised country-by-country and reforms are, in principle, presented in the order corresponding to the thematic domains used in the Council of Europe's specialised database HUDOC EXEC and the Committee of Ministers' Annual Reports on the Supervision of the Execution of the European Court of Human Rights' judgments.

Many reforms address issues which appear to be on-going challenges in the member State. The effects of reforms adopted at one point in time may thus need to be monitored and possibly re-evaluated as conditions change.²

¹ The summaries are the sole responsibility of the Department for the execution of the judgments of the European Court of Human Rights.

² The presentation is limited to the information provided at the time of the adoption of the final resolution. It is recalled in this context that the Committee of Ministers has issued Recommendation \(2004\)5 on the verification of the compatibility of draft laws, existing laws and administrative practice with standards laid down in the European Convention on Human Rights.

Functioning of justice

➤ Fairness of proceedings

2003 amendments of the Criminal Procedure Act provided that acquitted persons are eligible to claim compensation from the State for any damage that they have sustained as a result of the prosecution without being required to prove that they had not committed the offences charged with.

➤ Legal certainty

The Code of Criminal Procedure of 1995 created a new level of jurisdiction providing for improved legal certainty. Appeals made against judgments of the city courts would now fall within the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal which is competent both as regards points of fact, law and procedure.

➤ Remedies against excessive length of proceedings

Measures to accelerate criminal and civil proceedings were adopted in 2002 and 2005 respectively. These measures were combined with the possibility to obtain compensation in cases of excessively lengthy proceedings and, in criminal cases, a reduction in the length of sentences. A number of measures were also adopted to accelerate proceedings concerning industrial property rights.

Protection of family life

➤ Expulsions and best interests of the child

In 2011, the Ministry of Justice issued new instructions to the Immigration Directorate to align administrative practice with the European Court's case-law. They underlined the general principles and considerations to be taken into account, including the importance of a thorough assessment of each individual case, paying particular attention to the best interests of the children of persons subject to expulsion.

➤ Right to respect for correspondence

Following the European Court's judgment, the Supreme Court, in its criminal case-law, has clearly settled that seized data which might contain correspondence protected due to legal professional privilege (LPP) should be carefully sifted through by the police. In June 2021, the Prosecutor General adopted a Directive with clear and specific procedural guarantees to prevent LPP from being compromised by the police search of digital data carriers. The Directive created a new technical unit within the police, distinct from the investigating agents, responsible for performing the filtering of digitally stored data. The officers in the unit must follow strict rules on confidentiality, verifiability, and the secure storage of confidential data.

Freedom of expression

➤ Defamation

In 2004, a new law abolished civil liability for defamation following a publication, in good faith, of factual statements on issues of general interest that were eventually proven to be untrue.

➤ Broadcasting

In order to better secure small political parties' access to television during elections, the Statutes of the National Public Broadcaster (NRK) was changed, in 2009, to include an obligation to provide broad and balanced coverage of political elections and editorial coverage also to smaller parties. Since 2008, all political parties may also use a new TV channel, "Frikanalen" (the Open Channel) to communicate political messages.

➤ Protection of property rights

To strike a fair balance between the interests of landowners (the lessors) and leaseholders (Lessees), amendments to the Ground Lease Act of 2015 introduced a mechanism allowing one-off rent increases reflecting the real market value of the land. Lessees maintain the right to extension of the lease when the contract expires. However, should they wish to do so, the new law grants the lessors a one-off upward rent adjustment.

➤ Right to education

To prevent undue preference of the Christian faith in State primary schools, the Education Act was amended in 2008 in order to set up classes in "Religion, Philosophies of Life and Ethics". The new curriculum emphasises that religions and philosophies of life are to be presented in an objective, critical and pluralistic manner. As regards the partial exemption scheme, the law enjoins schools to respect the religious and philosophical convictions of pupils and their parents and to ensure the right to equivalent education. Disputes on the application of the exemption clause may be brought before courts.
