The convention recognises a series of rights for victims of human trafficking, in particular the right to be identified as a victim, the right to protection and assistance. To improve the victim identification, referral, and protection processes, it is important to establish a multidisciplinary cooperation, in which all anti-trafficking actors fulfil their obligations towards the presumed victims. The workshop will discuss processes and tools for detection, identification, and referral of victims, while highlighting country experiences in this field.

- WORKSHOP VI: Combating violence against women and children

The Conventions on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (Istanbul) and on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse (Lanzarote) have one essential point in common: they are built upon a rights-based approach. To ensure that the rights of women and children who are victims of violence are fully respected, it is essential that the institutions and professionals involved in their care put in place principles and mechanisms for multi-sectoral cooperation throughout the intervention chain. This multisectoral cooperation is intended to ensure the coherence of the judicial, medical, psychological, and social care of victims by avoiding the risks of re-traumatisation. The workshop will detail the fundamental principles of this multisectoral cooperation and will illustrate them through concrete examples.
