Geneva

Abuse, exploitation, trafficking and all forms of violence against children are heinous crimes – ending them by 2030 is one of the UN Sustainable Development Goals. How can states live up to this commitment?

The Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse (the Lanzarote Convention) is the most comprehensive international instrument on protecting children from sexual exploitation and sexual abuse. It serves as a blueprint for any country developing legislation and policies to prevent sexual exploitation and abuse of children, protect victims, prosecute offenders, and promote national and international co-operation. The Convention is an open convention, made in Europe but not exclusive to Europe. This means that any country in the world can join this Convention and benefit from the unique mechanism it provides to strengthen legislation, policy and practice, through the Lanzarote Committee. 48 countries are currently Parties to the Convention.

- ▶ What are the benefits of joining the Lanzarote Convention?
- ▶ What practical support and policy guidance do States Parties receive?
- ▶ What is the Barnahus model and why does it work?
