Committee on Social Affairs, Health and Sustainable Development

Minutes

of the public hearing on "Public health emergency: the need for a holistic approach to multilateralism and health care" held in Marrakech on 16 March

In the framework of the report currently in preparation on "Public health emergency: the need for a holistic approach to multilateralism and health care" by Ms Selin Sayek Böke (Türkiye, SOC), the Committee held a public hearing with the participation of:

- ✓ Ms Latifa Belakhel, head of division: non transmissible diseases, Ministry of Health and Social protection
- ✓ Mr Chakib Nejjari, professor of epidemiology & public health, vice-president health pole, Euromed University (Fez)

Ms Olena Khomenko (Ukraine, EC/DA), Second Vice-Chairperson of the Committee, opened the hearing and introduced the guest speakers.

Mr Nejjari noted that global problems had to be met with global responses, and referred to environmental challenges, demographics, and relations between animal and human health. The world had suffered five other public health emergencies since 2005. All of them demonstrated the importance of rapid reaction by states and WHO. Global reaction had to be evaluated and decisions had to be taken based on the expertise of WHO. This applied to all health risks covered by WHO's mandate.

A holistic approach was needed within and between countries, and building resilience was important. Moreover, states had to anticipate risks under the "One Health" approach. Mr Nejjari underlined that medicines and healthcare services had to be considered as public goods. The ongoing public research at international level was highly important for developing and manufacturing medicines and vaccines. However, commercialisation of research should be avoided. Moreover, accessibility to and classification of treatments and vaccines as rights and public goods were highly pertinent.

Ms Belakhel spoke about Morocco's management of the Covid-19 pandemic, which was consistent with the International Health Regulations of 2005 and WHO recommendations. Morocco had a multisectoral and holistic approach, ensuring equity between population groups. The multisectoral approach to public health emergencies consisted of a crisis management committee, regional health safety centres and co-ordination facilities between central and local committees. Decisions were made by the Ministry of Health, local units that worked together within the ministry and at regional level.

The Central Co-ordination Unit (Poste Central de Coordination – PCC) ensured the continuity of the operational conduct of government action in crisis management. It had powers to pre-position means of intervention in high-risk areas, to allocate resources to prefectures and provinces (PCP), to centralise reports that came from PCPs and produce national reports, to organise simultaneous operations, to define needs for international help desired by Morocco in the event of a major crisis, and to co-ordinate the activities of NGOs that wished to contribute to the national efforts.

The national strategy also reached out to the foreign population in Morocco through specifically designed communication and awareness raising. This included information leaflets in Arabic, French and English, as well as information helplines. Covid-19 vaccines were free of charge to migrants, refugees, and asylum seekers.

The Chairperson then opened the floor for discussion.

¹ The minutes were approved and declassified by the Committee on Social Affairs, Health and Sustainable Development at its meeting on 22 May 2023.

Ms Günay welcomed an important and timely report. Reaction was slow at the beginning of the Covid-19 pandemic, and it revealed the failures of WHO and the UN. The collapse of the international trade system had led to the hoarding of masks and vaccines by some countries and thus undermined access for other nations. This had created inequities between low- and middle-income countries and rich countries. In paragraph 13, WHO's response to the earthquakes in Türkiye and Syria was given as an example of an emergency response. The world should be better prepared for natural disasters and for a sustainable response; a holistic approach was urgently needed at international and national levels, because public health disasters did not know any borders.

Mr Arsenis thanked the guest speakers. Over the last two years, the pandemic had made one thing clear: multilateral co-operation of governments and regions in the health sector was crucial. No country or region, not even the most powerful, could tackle such a public health emergency on its own. International health organisations, such as WHO, had to be strengthened and rendered more inclusive and transparent in terms of decision-making processes. Other regional mechanisms could also be established, and national health care systems should be strengthened. In addition to a holistic approach in the provision of health systems, the unique characteristics of every country should be considered. Health care ought to be considered a public good that all citizens had access to, and public policies should provide essential healthcare to every citizen.

Mr Amraoui thanked his colleagues for their excellent presentations and contributions to the discussion. He criticised the multilateral response to the Covid-19 pandemic under the authority of WHO. There had been much hesitation by WHO in the beginning of the pandemic, and the decision to declare the virus a public health emergency of international concern had come too late. There was a need to discuss ways of making WHO more efficient and equipping it with powers to have better access to information. WHO had not had sufficient information about the virus.

Ms Ovchynnykova wanted to draw the attention of her colleagues to the impact of war on health and the environment in her country. There were also many global challenges that affected public health. Health and the environment were closely interconnected. The war in Ukraine had already affected all of Europe and had impacts well beyond the continent. Discussions around the protection of health systems needed an interdisciplinary approach to IT systems, housing, environmental hazards to health, and so on.

Mr Davies welcomed the preliminary draft report and highlighted the challenge of air pollution. There had been much research during the pandemic showing a direct link between air pollution and the number of infections. People from poor households were more exposed to air pollution in their local communities and homes. As for the access to medicines, vaccines, and treatments, these should be accessible to everyone as public goods.

The Chairperson then thanked the participants for their contributions and closed the hearing.
