Lack of diligence in investigations into medical fault after death in hospital

The Patients' Rights Act was amended in 2017 to require courts to prioritise cases in which patients have suffered injuries or died in the course of medical treatment. In addition, the "Šilih Project" was initiated in January 2017: it aims in particular at putting in place measures to prevent medical errors, ensure the effective exercise of the right to secure adequate medical treatment of high quality, and ensure the effectiveness of court proceedings for the establishment of the responsibility of medical practitioners or health professionals without delay.

> Conditions of detention

Poor detention conditions in the Ljubljana prison and lack of effective remedies

The conditions of detention in the closed and remand sections of the Ljubljana prison have been improved. A preventive remedy for challenging inadequate conditions of detention was set up for remand and convicted prisoners. A compensatory remedy was also introduced in order to obtain compensation for poor detention conditions: criteria for the settlement of claims were clarified in April 2018. Statistics show the efficiency of these proceedings.

Final Resolution CM/ResDH(2020)102

A comprehensive and multidimensional approach was adopted to combat prison overcrowding: every prisoner in the Ljubljana prison now has at least 4.5m² of living space; the capacity of the prison has been increased, as well of the time spent out of cell and the diversity of activities offered. The Probation Act adopted in May 2017 set up a dedicated probation body to facilitate the use of non-custodial sentences and conditional releases. The construction of a new prison in Ljubljana has been decided, and a special procedure for automatic triggering of transfers to other prisons has been set up.

> Length of judicial proceedings

Efficiency of justice was enhanced by an extensive reform of the judiciary between 2005 and 2012 with the goal to provide for the structural and organisational reform of judiciary and to eliminate backlogs in domestic courts. The reform included legislative and capacity building measures. An acceleratory and a compensatory remedy in civil and criminal proceedings were introduced by the Act on the Protection of the Right to a Trial without undue Delay ("the 2006 Act").
