One of the three judges at the trial of Vladimir Kara-Murza.  Previously sanctioned under the Magnitsky Law for his role in the arrest and detention of Sergei Magnitsky.	On March 6, 2023 Judge Podoprigrorov ordered to extend detention of Vladimir Kara-Murza until 27 August 2023.  Podoprigrorov stated in the ruling justifying the extension of detention that releasing Vladimir Kara-Murza from detention "will entail the considerable reduction in the effectiveness of measures of control, shall enable him to obstruct the criminal proceeding."  Podoprigrorov refused to apply the law which requires detainees with serious diagnosed illnesses be released from detention, saying "the petition about the state of health of the detainee may be obtained by him, or his lawyer or the court later, when the court receives evidence that the provision of this information was denied."  Podoprigrorov approved a closed hearing in the trial against Vladimir Kara-Murza to start on March 13, 2023. Podoprigrorov chairs the collegium of three judges at the trial.  Three charges against Vladimir Kara-Murza at trial include:	"Ruling: ... Set a closed hearing in the criminal case against Vladimir Vladimirovich Kara-Murza ... for March 13, 2023 ..."  "The preventive measure against Vladimir Vladimirovich Kara-Murza be left unchanged in the form of remand in custody and the period of his detention be extended for six months from the date of receipt of the criminal case by the court, i.e. until 27 August 2023"	6 March and 17 April 2023	Court Order issued by Judge Podoprigrorov on March 6, 2023	Vladimir Kara-Murza's Court Verdict (25 year-sentence) issued by Judge Podoprigrorov Judge Belitsky Judge Dorokhina on April 17, 2023	Canada, USA, UK and Australia
