Introduction and methodology

This report provides an analysis of the broadcast of films, series and documentaries in the European Union.

Scope of the report

- This report deals with only a fraction of programmes broadcast by television channels. But the delineation between programming genres faces significant limitations.
- The report aims mainly at answering the following research questions:
 - How many different works are on offer on television and, among them, how many European works?
 - What is the origin of programmes broadcast on TV?
 - Who are main exporters of works broadcast on TV?
- This report does not intend to measure the quotas foreseen in the AVMS directive. In particular, this report focuses on first runs and not all runs by a given TV channel; it uses, as the main indicator, number of works and not duration.

The sample used for the report

- The European Audiovisual Observatory commissioned media-press with drawing up a title-by-title list of all programmes corresponding to the above-mentioned categories broadcast in 2023 by a selection of TV channels.

The sample used for the report (cont.)

- The sample provided by media-press comprised 1 663 TV channels from 25 European Union countries.
- The programming schedules of these 1 663 TV channels included over 436 000 first runs⁽¹⁾, i.e. excluding reruns by the same TV channel.

Definitions of key variables and indicators used in this report

- Geographic scope: AT; BE; BG; CZ; DE; DK, EE; ES; FI; FR; GR; HR; HU; IE; IT; LT; LU; LV; NL; PL; PT; RO; SE; SI; SK.
- European works are defined in accordance with the AVMS directive.
- Number of audiovisual works:
 - One film or TV film and one documentary (unitary) is accounted for as one audiovisual work; one TV fiction or documentary series is accounted for as one audiovisual work.
 - Reruns of the same work by the same TV channel are not accounted for.
- Categories of broadcasters – the report uses the following concepts: free and pay TV; public and private TV; major channels (TV channels with an audience share of at least 1%).
- Broadcast during prime time: any programme with at least one broadcast during prime time, i.e. between 19:30 and 22:00 (except in Spain: between 22:00 and 24:00).

- Export: broadcast of a work on a channel in a country other than the main producing country.

Limits

- Identification of films: films are labelled as such in the TV channels' programming schedules; this does not imply that they have been theatrically released in Europe.
- Allocation of country of origin: the allocation of country of origin was provided by media-press and errors may have occurred for individual titles.
- Prime-time concept: the prime-time definition could not be specified by country and therefore may imperfectly reflect primetime in individual countries.
- Genres: the classification of works as animation, documentary and fiction has big limitations as programmes are tagged with several non-comparable tags.

Key findings

A very large number of works⁽¹⁾ were exploited on television in the EU in 2023

- Over different 138 000 works were broadcast at least once.
- The figure includes over 88 000 different European works, with a majority of documentaries.
- On average, over 12 000 different works (including close to 6 500 European works) were broadcast in a given country, with strong variations countries, from about 6 000 up to over 31 000.⁽²⁾

A high share of European works, split in 3 main blocks

- European works accounted for 51% of works broadcast in the EU in 2023, ahead of US works (40%).
- Among European works:
 - EU27 national works accounted for 22% and EU27 non-national works for 16%, i.e. a total of 38% for EU27 works.
 - Other European works (i.e. mostly UK works) accounted for 13%.

Higher share of EU27 works for unitary documentaries, lower share for films

- The share of EU27 works was generally higher for documentaries than for fiction works and, among documentaries, was higher for unitaries than for series. Among fiction works, the share of EU27 works was higher for series than for films. Documentaries tended to be primarily national works, while the majority of films were EU27 non-national.
- The share of non-EU European works (i.e. mainly UK works) was higher in series (documentary or fiction) than in films or unitary documentaries.
- The share of European works was higher for live-action works than for animation.

(1) See definitions in section « Introduction and Methodology ».

(2) Data for each country is directly impacted by the number of channels in the sample. It should be looked at with caution.

In most countries, European non-national works were key to the share of European works.

Generally speaking, high-production countries (France, Germany, Poland, Italy) had a higher-than-average share of European works, and of national works among European works, but Spain was an exception. Other 'smaller' production countries such as Austria, Finland and Sweden also achieved a higher-than-average proportion of European works. In most other countries, European non-national works were key to the proportion of European works, whatever this level was.

A higher share of European works on public TV channels

- The share of EU27 works was higher than the share of European works for TV channels with an audience share of 1% or more.
- It was also higher for free TV channels and for public TV channels.

Coproductions boost circulation

- A given EU27 work was available on average in 1.4 EU country. The figure was higher for UK works (2.7 countries) and US works (3.6 countries).
- The figure was higher for EU27 films and TV films (1.9 countries) than for EU27 documentaries and fiction series.
- European coproductions⁽¹⁾ circulated significantly better than 100% national works: all types of works included, a European coproduction has been broadcast on TV in 2.8 countries vs. 1.4 for a 100% national work.

The exports of European works in the European Union are led by three countries: the United Kingdom, France and Germany.

- The United Kingdom is by far the primary exporter of European documentary and fiction series.
- France leads films exports and Germany unitary documentaries exports.

The top 20 of the most exported works mostly includes theatrical films.

- 9 out of the top 20 most exported films were directed or produced by Luc Besson's Europa Corp., with a strong 'franchise' component. More generally speaking, films in the top 20 were successful both in their national market and in other EU27 markets with a high proportion of admissions coming from non-national markets. Most of the titles are action-driven blockbusters, but some more 'art-house' films also make it to the top 20.
- As regards TV series, 12 of the 20 most exported EU27 TV fiction series are children animated TV series, of which 11 had France as the main production country. The rest of the ranking is made of high-end television series.
- As regards documentaries, 15 of the 20 most exported EU27 documentaries were historical documentaries.

Works available

Average per country

On average⁽¹⁾, at country level, over 12 000 different works were broadcast, including close to 6 500 European works (52%).

These figures should be seen as a minimum, as only national TV channels were considered, but viewers also access non-national channels.

Beyond the average of about 12 500, the number of different works available on TV by country in 2023 varied between from about 6 000 to over 31 000. This includes about 6 500 different European works, again with strong variations between countries, from about 2 500 to over 22 000.⁽¹⁾

⁽¹⁾ Data for each country is directly impacted by the number of channels in the sample. It should be looked at with caution.

Origin of works broadcast in 2023

European works accounted for 51% of works broadcast in the EU in 2023. Among European works, EU27 works accounted for 38% and other European works for 13%. And among EU27 works, EU national works accounted for 22% and EU non-national works accounted for 16%.

Reminder: Shares are calculated on the basis of the number of titles and not their duration and therefore do not match the AVMSD criteria for assessment of quotas.

Origin of “works” broadcast (EU, 2023)

The share of European works is generally higher for documentaries than for fiction works and, among documentaries, is higher for unitaries than for series. Among fiction works, the share of European works is higher for series than for films.

Among EU works, documentaries are primarily national works, and films and TV films are primarily non-national.

Among European works, the share of other European works (i.e. mainly UK works) is higher in series (documentary or fiction) than on films or unitary documentaries.

Origin of works broadcast by type of works (EU, 2023)

A mapping of the share of national works among all European works shows strong contrasts between countries. Generally speaking, high-production countries (France, Germany, Poland, Italy) had a higher-than-average share of European works, and of national works among European works, but Spain was an exception. Other ‘smaller’ production countries such as Austria, Finland and Sweden also achieved a higher-than-average proportion of European works. In most other countries, European non-national works were key to the proportion of European works, whatever this level was.

High share of European works and high share of national works

Low share of European works and low share of national works

High share of European works and low share of national works

Both for documentaries and fiction, the share of EU works is lower when considering the number of seasons instead of the number of series. This results from a lower number of seasons per EU series when compared to series of US origin.

Origin of fiction series and seasons broadcast (EU, 2023)

Origin of documentary series and seasons broadcast (EU, 2023)

The share of EU works is slightly lower for animation than for live action. EU animation works are more often non-national works.

The share of European works (both films and TV shows) tends to be higher for major channels (with a 1% or more audience share), for free channels and for public channels.

Reminder: shares are calculated on the basis of the number of titles and not their duration and therefore do not match the AVMSD criteria for assessing quotas.

Circulation of works

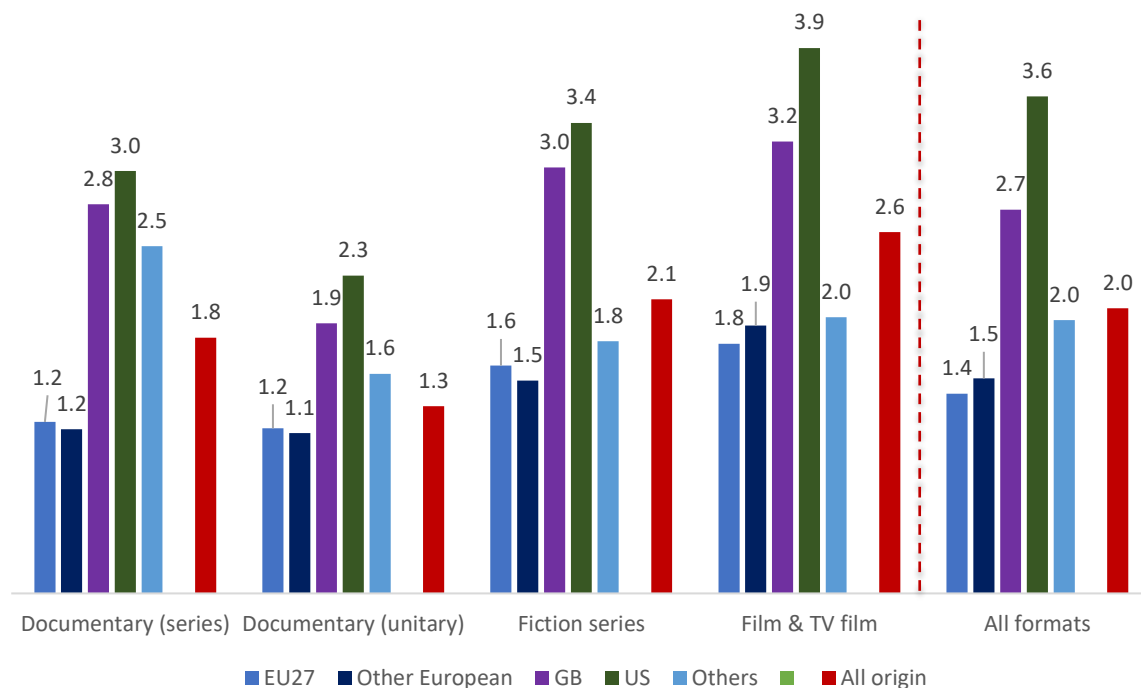

Circulation of works

All type of works included, a given work was broadcast in 2 EU countries in 2023.

On average, the same films & TV films were available in a larger number of countries (2.6) than other types of works (1.8 for documentary series; 1.3 for unitary documentaries; 2.1 for fiction series).

Whatever the type of works, US and UK works were available in a larger number of countries than EU works.

Circulation of coproductions

The sample included about 10 000 European coproductions,⁽¹⁾ i.e. 11% of all European works. Unsurprisingly the share of coproductions was the highest for films and TV films and the lowest for documentaries.

European coproductions circulated significantly better than 100% national works: all types of works included, a European coproduction has been broadcast on TV in 2.8 countries vs. 1.4 for a 100% national work.

Exports of European works

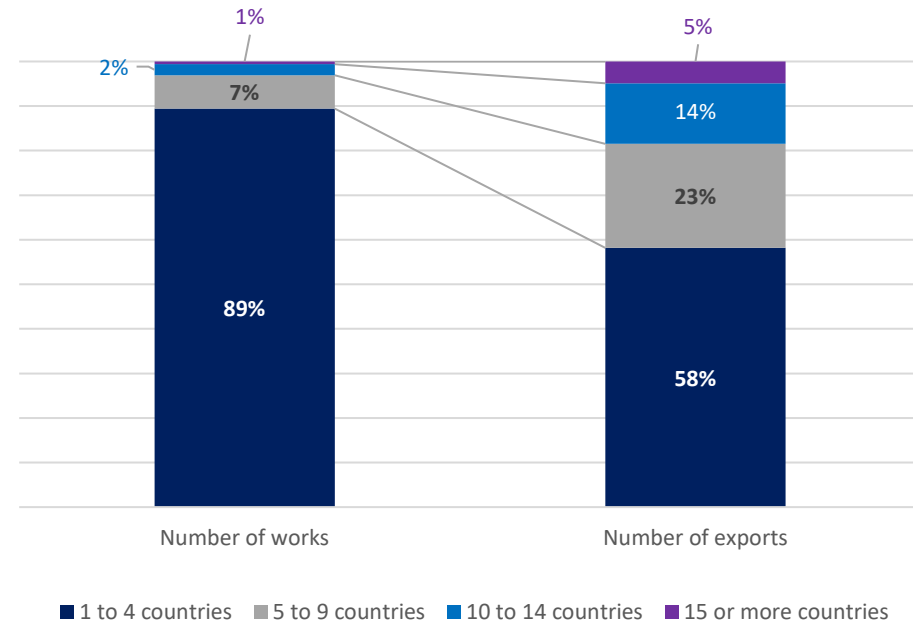

The exports⁽¹⁾ of European works in the European Union are led by three countries: the United Kingdom, France and Germany.

Out of the 38 000 works which were exported at least once, about 1% were exported in at least 15 countries, and about 10% were exported in at least 5 countries.

⁽¹⁾ 1 broadcast outside the country of production = 1 export.

Breaking down the share of exports by type of work shows that, among the top five exporters, the United Kingdom is particularly strong in fiction and documentary series. As regards films, France, United Kingdom and Germany lead exports.⁽¹⁾
